BOOM NAPANEE! BOOM NAPANEE!

This week we received a copy of a western paper and some ten pages of it were devoted to the booming of one of the little "Jirk" towns out there, and it makes us green with envy, when we stop to consider the methods adopted by enterprising people to boom their town, and compare them with the "sit tight" ideas of some of our citizens. And it is not because they have more ability out west than we have at home, but because the westerners have the "boom habit" and we have not.

The people of Napanee control their own destiny. Do they propose to travel along in the same old rut as heretofore, or will they put forth an effort to help make Napanee grow?

If some of our citizens would become infected with the "boom bug" it would help to start the ball rolling, and once started who is there among us who can tell where it will end.

Free taxation for a period of ten years, free factory sites, cheap power for manufacturing, excellent shipping facilities, combined with one of the finest and healthiest towns in Canada to reside in is a combination hard to beat and we have faith to hope that the council of 1912 will make it possible that all these advantages can be advertised broadcast which must ultimately result to the good of our town.

What Napanee needs, and what it needs badly is a good strong council. Men who will take the initiative and work with the one idea, and that of booming the town.

It is not to be expected that the citizen who is given a seat at the council board shall devote his entire time to the interests of the town, but it is expected that outside of the regular routine affairs of the town some little time will be found for thought and action towards advancing the interest of Napanee.

Think it over Mr. Elector. It all remains with you as to the complexion of the council. It remains for you to say whether you want a progressive body of men, or whether you are satisfied to allow things to remain as they are.

Hair Dye.

We have the "old fashioned hair restorer" that restores the hair to its natural color. It is not a nitrate of silver dye that shows on the hair so everybody can see that the hair has been dyed, but a "color restorer". It is put up in $1.00 bottles, and can be procured in Napanee only at Wallace's Drug Store—The Rexall Agency.

TILL AFTER THE ELECTIONS

A Northern Ontario correspondent of The Toronto Globes sends the following picture of conditions in the mining country under the Whitney Government, which has been getting a great deal of undeserved credit for law enforcement.

"All the 'blind pigs' of the North country are running wide open till after the election. By this I mean that there is no concealment; the bottle is passed over the counter and the customer helps himself. In Porcupine there was a seizure of liquor, but this was merely a blind in case the absence of restraint should be noticed and commented upon. On the same day the seizure was made the sellers were marketing it as usual. I never saw the trade so open before in the North country. The whisky seized came in the name of friends of the 'blind piggers', who signed an order that it was for their private use. This is the way the business is now run. While the fines will bring in revenue to the Government, the real violators of the law will not be fined, and they are quite ready to pay the fines of the men to whom it is consigned, as the trade is enormously lucrative. One dealer in wet goods was very frank about it. 'Oh, I guess we can go on like this till after the election, he said; 'then we shall have to be careful.' This is how the 'blind piggers' vote is being bought from North Bay to Cochrane all through Northern Ontario."

There is no doubt at all that this statement describes the actual condition of affairs in regard to the enforcement of the liquor law in the North country. To secure the vote of the illicit sellers of liquor the machinery of the law is stopped "till after the election." What do the strong temperance men who are also Conservatives think of the situation? The "blind pigger" of the North is a peril to the moral and material welfare of the whole mining region, but as long as he votes right the bottle is passed over the counter openly, at election time. And in temperance communities the candidates of the Government that permits these gross and open breaches of the law tell the electors how firmly Sir James stands for law enforcement. The administration of the liquor law in Northern Ontario is an organized hypocrisy.

J. L. BOYES,

HISTORICAL LECTURE.

Prof. W. L. Grant Delivers Lecture.

The regular monthly meeting of the Lennox and Addington Historical Society, was held in Historical Hall, on Friday evening, Nov. 24th. When the meeting was called to order at 8 o'clock, every seat in the Hall was filled, and several gentlemen were standing.

The President referred to the fact that it was the date of the 104th anniversary of the death of Joseph Brant (Thayendanegea) and spoke of a communication received from the Historical Society, of Brantford, telling of a meeting to be held at the same time when a review of the life of the great Chief of the Six Nations was to be given. Mr. Warner gave a short sketch of Brant's life, speaking particularly of his life as a boy in the conquest of Canada from the French, and as a man in helping the British against her rebellious colonies.

Prof. W. L. Grant, of Queen's University, was then introduced and delivered a lecture from the subject "Boundary disputes between Canada and the United States." It was the first opportunity which the people of Napanee have had of hearing Prof. Grant, and his lecture was listened to with keen interest. He spoke more particularly of the Ashburton Treaty, starting with the statement of the general impression that the United States had usually been the winner in the numerous diplomatic cases over the question of the international boundary, particularly in the lengthy Ashburton Treaty, which was won by the United States. He pointed out, however, that in this last case at least, the United States did not out-general Great Britain, in fact Great Britain was really the winner. Commencing with the early days

MR. T. G. CARSCALLEN

On Bi-Lingual Schools

Mr. T. G. Carscadden, Conservative Candidate, in a letter to the Beaver last week endeavours to explain his position on the school question. Mr. Carscadden says, as he understands it, there are legally no bi-lingual schools. He can easily say there are no bi-lingual schools legally, but this does not alter the well known facts that such schools exist in the Province of Ontario at the present time in large numbers, also that these same schools have been existing for years under the direction of the present Government. It matters not to the electors whether they are legal or not but what the average citizen wants to know is whether or not Mr. Carscadden is pledged to fight to have them abolished. Mr. Carscadden has sat in two parliaments and we have never yet heard of him having made any protest against the existing state of affairs or voting at all, excepting at the call of Sir J. P. Whitney.

Mr. Carscadden wishes to uphold the English language now. We would ask him why he has not done so during the number of years he has sat in the Legislature. The truth is that Mr. Carscadden or any other conservative member of the Legislature dare not do anything. Sir J. P. Whitney is "boss" and runs the whole show. Should not the County of Lennox be represented by a member who, no matter which side of the house he sits on, will have the courage and ability to protest against abuses such as the present government have allowed to flourish.

The United Empire Loyalist Chapter of the Imperial Order of the Daughters of the Empire, held a programme meeting in the Town Hall, on Thursday evening, Nov. 23rd, which was open to the public. After a few appropriate introductory remarks from the Regent, Mrs. Harshaw, Miss Catharine Welland Merritt, organizer of the National Chapter, of Canada, who came to Napanee for the purpose, gave a very interesting patriotic address.

Miss Merritt spoke of her experience in connection with her work during the Coronation Celebration in London, where she opened an office as head quarters for the members, and also told something of the social side of her visit.

The National Chapter of Canada received Imperial recognition in England and many courtesies were extended to its representatives. Seats were reserved for members on stands along the route of the coronation procession; they had places on the Admiralty guest ship for the Naval Review; permission was granted them by King George to enter the chapel at Frogmore, to place a wreath on the Mausoleum of Queen Victoria, and many other privileges were accorded them. Invitations to numerous private and public social functions were also extended to them.

In spite of the inclement weather the members of the local chapter and their friends attended the meeting and

International boundary particularly in the lengthy boundary which was the Ashburton Treaty, he noted distinctly, that in this last case at least, the United States did not out-general Great Britain, in fact
Great Britain was really the winner.

Commencing with the early days when the then loyal colonists were disputing with the French, who then owned Canada, and claiming that their lands ran to the St. Lawrence River, he followed the discussion down to the supposed settlement by the Treaty of Versailles in 1783, which named the boundary between the new United States and the British colony of Canada. The meaning of this treaty was soon a matter of controversy, and the question of its interpretation nearly caused a war between the two countries. Prof. Grant explained carefully both the British and the United States contentions, and by means of a most excellent series of maps (displayed by lantern slides) he made the subject very clear. His maps were most interesting, being reproductions of the earliest known maps of that portion of the country, as well as those made since the district has been properly surveyed and the dispute settled. No one could possibly hear the lecture and not have a clear idea of the cause of the dispute, the contention of each country, and the final settlement of the same in 1812, by the Ashburton Treaty, when Lord
Ashburton acting on behalf of Great Britain, and Daniel Webster acting on behalf of the United States, settled
the matter for all time.

The President of the Society thanked Prof. Grant for coming to Napanee and explained how much a lecture of this nature meant to the people here.
He also expressed a wish that Prof.
Grant might soon be here again.

Vol. III of the Papers and Records of the Society, was issued during the month. This little book contains the first of the clippings from the Casey Scrap Book, and when the series is complete they will form a valuable addition to the history of this district.
Mr. Herrington, who did all the editorial work, gives a short introduction
explaining the intention of the Society with regard to the series. A picture of Mr. Casey makes an appropriate frontispiece. The book like its predecessors sells for 25c.

the King."

We have been told that we may ex-electricity by Dec. 15th. We have been fooled so often in this matter that all we can say is that we hope so.

However, we have noticed a couple of men going around hanging some paraphernalia on the poles, which means we presume, that the lamps will be in operation sometime.

Word received in town from Toronwell. The wound caused by the opera-this Mr. Richardson is expected to

How is this for a thriller? Three

QUEEN MARY'S SERVANTS

SIX OF HER NINE MAIDS KNOWN AS DRESSERS.

Her Gowns Numbered—Gloves
Kept on Stretchers—Care of Jewels.

There are nine maids who are in special attendance on the Queen; these maids are not under the control of the housekeeper as are all the other maids at Buckingham Palace, but are under the management of a head waiting maid, and their duty consists entirely in waiting on the Queen.

Six of the maids are known as dressers, says the Gentlewoman, and two of them aid the Queen in making her toilet. Nowadays the ladies of the household assist very little in the preparation of her toilet. In Queen Victoria's reign the Mistress of the Robes was usually in residence, and it was part of her duty to attend on the Queen in the royal dressing room, assisted by one or two ladies of the Peabody.

Queen Alexandra, however, dispensed altogether with the service of the Mistress of the Robes in the royal dressing room and the duties of assisting the Queen in making her toilet was customarily performed by two of her personal maids, who are known as dressers. Queen Mary practically follows the same procedure; one of the ladies of the household remains in attendance in the personal apartments when the Queen is in her dressing room, but she is actually assisted in her toilet only by the dressers.

THE QUEEN'S DRESSES,

robes and gowns are kept in a robe room lined with a number of big wardrobes. The head dresser has charge of the wardrobes and gives out to the assistant dressers the dresses required for use.

The lady in attendance at the time on the Queen sends the head dresser over-night instructions as to the dresses the Queen will require for wear the following day. The instructions are written on a card on which the time when each dress will be required is stated; the dress is indicated by a number. All the dresses are entered up in a robe book and numbered.

A duplicate copy of the robe book is kept in the Queen's dressing-room, and when the Queen gives the lady in attendance instructions as to the dresses she requires for wear the latter has simply to write down the numbers which are entered against them in the robe book on the instruction card.

It is part of the work of the dresser to look after the gold, silver and ivory ware in the royal dressing room in the way of beautifully mounted brushes, scent bottles, gloves boxes, as well as a variety of knickknacks, photograph frames and various ornaments. The Queen usually has from forty to fifty pairs of gloves in use, half of which are for evening wear.

The gloves are kept on stretchers and each box contains half a dozen pairs. It is part of one dresser's work to

Some firms who are in the habit of receiving visits from royalty have a private entrance for royal customers, but neither Queen Mary or Queen Alexandra has one; but a private room must be set apart for the reception of the Queen whenever she visits a modiste's establishment to order a gown. As soon as a new gown is delivered to Buckingham Palace particulars of it are entered up in the robe book by the Queen's head maid, and it is duly numbered.

When the Queen honors any of her friends by becoming a guest at their house the head maid and a travelling maid always accompany her. Sometimes the royal entourage may include three or four of the Queen's maids, but at least two, including the head maid, invariably travel with the Queen.

In the suite of apartments set apart for the Queen there must not be less than three rooms for her maids, in one of which the royal trunks and dress cases are stored, and these apartments must be adjacent or at any rate be close to the Queen's personal apartments. In houses at all frequently honored by the presence of the Queen nowadays there is usually telephonic communication between the rooms allotted to the Queen's maids and her own room. This arrangement has existed for some time at Buckingham Palace, though there as a matter of fact the directions to the maids are usually conveyed by one of

THE LADIES IN WAITING.

From time to time it of course becomes necessary to remove numbers of the Queen's dresses out of the royal wardrobe when she no longer requires them for wear. This is done at regular intervals, and the dresses that are put out of use are disposed of in various ways. Some of them are sold to a dress agent and the proceeds given to various charities. The Queen's head maid conducts the sale. Other dresses are given to the head maid and some are given to the other dependents of royalty. When the royal dresses are sold through an agency it is always made a condition of sale that the dresses are not to be resold in this country.

Though the Queen's maids have plenty of work to do, especially the head maid, who is in constant attendance in the personal apartments, they have on the whole a rather easier time of it than the other royal servants, and generally speaking more liberty, for they are only required to be on duty in the personal apartments. When their presence is not required they can pass their time very much as they please and frequently are enabled to go to their own homes a week or fortnight at a time.

At the end of the season when the court goes to Balmoral all the maids except the head maid and a travelling maid are allowed to go to their homes until October, though of course they must hold themselves in readiness to return to the court at once if their services should be required. The Queen's head maid is with the exception of the housekeeper the best paid of the royal maid servants.

HABITS OF WESTERN PEOPLE

ENGLAND SEEN THROUGH AN ORIENTAL'S SPECTACLES.

Japanese Admiration of Great Britain Is Tempered With Real Criticism.

I once inquired of a Japanese staff officer who had visited England, what surprised him most here. He and I knew one another well, so that he was willing to talk more freely than is often the case with his country men, says a writer in Everybody's Weekly.

"The thing that surprised and horrified me most in England," said he, "was when I first saw a husband kiss his wife in public, at a railway station. In Japan emotion is a thing to be concealed, not to be displayed. It is something so precious and too sacred to trail in the view of all chance passers-by. When I saw a man in front of crowds of others salute his wife in this fashion I felt a sense of sickness.

The English writer who attempted to show to the full the Japanese opinion of ourselves, would be very bold. It is not easy to find what the average Japanese really does think of us, and the man who supposes that he has ascertained the true Japanese mind is usually wrong. The Japanese are polite and secretive. Their politeness leads them to say kind things because they think it a matter of courtesy to do so; their secretiveness leads them to conceal their inner thoughts.

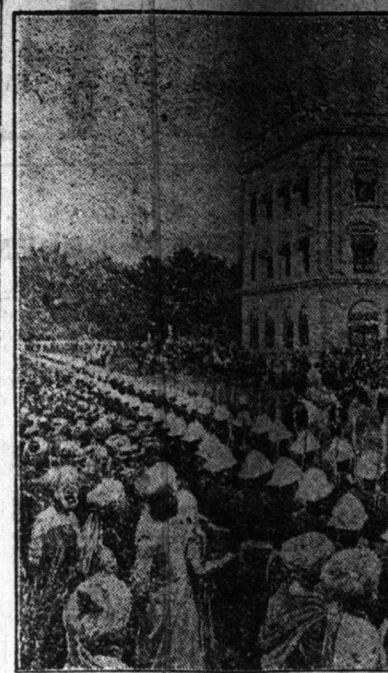

No one doubts that the sons of Nippon feel a very real admiration for our material prosperity. They recognize that so far as money-making, manufacturing, and mercantile skill are concerned, we are way ahead among the nations.

Many of them, influenced by European teaching, are beginning to sympathize more and more with our ethical codes. But the average unsophisticated Japanese who visits England for the first time, feels amused rather than overwhelmed by our odd ways. He regards us as morally in a very bad state, and our habits seem as whimsical to him as the customs of the people at Nikko seem strange to the average round-the-world tourist.

HOW WEST INFLUENCES EAST

A year ago a large number of Japanese came over to England for the Exhibition as exhibitors, as craftsmen, or as tourists. When they returned home, enterprising journalists of their race sought to obtain their frank opinions of Great Britain. These opinions were certainly frank, but as printed in the papers they were very far from complimentary. The Jiji Shimpō summed up these impressions in a biting article:

"These tourists went to the West believing that they would acquire much useful knowledge, and looking forward to carrying home many valuable hints for their country's improvement. All this outlook has been falsified. Actual disgust has taken the place of admiration. The first and most striking feature of Western civilization is flagrant learning to become a passionate cigarette smoker and a beer drinker. An old Japanese puritan a little time ago was bewailing to me the growing extravagance of his fellow-countrymen. "Can you believe it," he said, "there are many families in my own district who every day have a bottle of milk left at their houses; a bottle of milk a day for people who have to earn all they get. If things like this go on, and are encouraged by the state, what can become of our land? These growing habits of extravagance are undermining our national character."

ADMIRATION AND CRITICISM.

The Japanese who considers milk a luxury, who lives through bitter winter weather in rooms that it is difficult to keep warm, comes to England, and what does he find? In place of the small brazier of charcoal in cold weather, he sees roaring fires; our shops are piled up with articles of ostentatious luxury; the groaning boards of the average middle class family display a rich variety of food; he notices the expenditure on dress, on pleasure, on mere ornament; and he is, as a rule, not attracted but repelled by the costliness of our life.

One Japanese writer recently set out to correct the views of his fellow-countrymen on this question. He explained to them that the standard of living is much higher in the West than in the East, and that for them to raise hands of horror over our extravagance is as though the housewife living in an alley were to compare her state with that of a lady living in a great mansion.

When the Japanese comes to know us better, many of his first hard impressions of England are modified. Often enough he becomes a passionate admirer of our ideals of home life, of liberty, and of constitutional government. But even then it may be questioned if from forty to fifty pairs of gloves in use, half of which are for evening wear.

The gloves are kept on stretchers and each box contains half a dozen pairs. It is part of one dresser's work to put various pairs of gloves which the Queen has worn during the day on stretchers in the evening and put them back into their proper boxes. The glove boxes are made of ebony, inlaid with ivory and each has a small crown inlaid in gold or silver on the cover.

CARE OF THE JEWELS.

Two of her maids look after the Queen's jewels, though the jewel cases are actually in charge of a lady in waiting, who keeps the key of them when she is in waiting fastened to a strong bracelet. The lady in waiting gives out the jewels which the Queen desires to wear to the maids, who place them on the Queen's dressing table in readiness for her. The jewels are replaced in their cases every night and the cases are locked by the lady in waiting who is in charge of them.

Three of the Queen's maids are known as travelling maids, two of whom, together with the head maid, always travel with the Queen. One of the travelling maids is French and the other two English, and they are all good linguists. They have been in her service for many years and have accompanied the Queen in most of the royal journeys abroad.

It is the duty of the travelling maid to pack all the Queen's luggage when she travels. The packing of the luggage of the lady members of the household is done by the housekeeper, but the Queen's luggage is packed and looked after altogether by the travelling maids.

The Queen's trunk and travelling cases are made of solid leather, polished almost black, and round each trunk and case are painted two dark red bands, about an inch wide, the bands being about a foot to three feet apart, according to the size of the trunk. When the Queen is about to travel she informs one of her ladies in waiting of the dresses, jewels and personal possessions which she desires to take with her, and the lady in waiting sends a list of the dresses and other articles to the head maid, who is then responsible for their packing. When the packing has been completed the list is returned to the lady in waiting initialled by the head maid.

When the Queen is about to travel abroad and has a large number of instructions to give regarding her luggage and other matters in connection with the royal journey, a shorthand writer is usually summoned to take down

THE QUEEN'S DIRECTIONS.

These are then typed out and sent to the head maid. The head maid is also always present when a new robe is fitted on the Queen.

The Queen's dresses are nearly always fitted on at Buckingham Palace, but when she orders a new gown as a general rule she visits the modiste from whom it is to be ordered. The proprietor or manager of the firm is informed a few days beforehand of the Queen's intention to visit his establishment, and he must, of course, be ready to receive her when she arrives.

British Lion is Expected to Exceed This Speed.

Extraordinary speed records are expected to be made by the super-dreadnought cruiser Lion, now approaching completion at Davenport dockyard. At present Germany holds the record for dreadnought speed by a fraction of a knot. The first three British dreadnought cruisers, the Indomitable, Inflexible and Invincible, broke all existing records for armored ship speed. The best of the trio was the Indomitable with 28.7 knots. The Indefatigable surpassed these records on her trials toward the end of last year, making 29.13 knots.

In the meantime Germany had produced two fast armored cruisers, the Blucher, 24.4 knots, and Germany's first real dreadnought cruiser the 19,100 ton Von der Tann, 27.63 knots. Though written of in Germany as "the fastest armored ship in the world," the Von der Tann was really slower than the British Indomitable. Invincible and Indefatigable. Since then, however, Germany has really taken the lead with the battle cruiser Moltke, which recently on her trials made 29.5 knots. It is known that in spite of her huge displacement of 26,350 tons the British Lion is confidently expected to make well over 30 knots. The actual designed speed is 25 knots, but the Invincible, designed for 25 knots, with engines of 11,000 horse-power, made an average of 25 knots, so the Lion designed for 25, with 70,000 horse-power engines, is expected to make between 31 and 32 knots. The Lion is 470 feet long over all. Her armament consists of eight 13.5 inch guns, mounted in four turrets on the middle line, and twenty 4 inch quick firers for repelling torpedo attack.

DISPLACING CANAL MULE.

British Barge Owners see Cheaper Freight Rates.

A successful trip from London to Birmingham has been completed by a motor barge carrying a cargo of spar. It is claimed by the builders of the boat that the system of motor barges which they have in contemplation will revolutionize canal traffic. The motor boat which made this trip is somewhat smaller than the ordinary barge, being 71 feet long and seven feet beam. Its dimensions will enable it to enter any canal in the United Kingdom. This motor boat travels at the rate of three miles per hour at a cost of two cents per mile, while a horse barge, it is stated, only travels at half of the speed and the expense of operating is twice as much.

It is predicted by the builders of this boat that in a comparatively short time motor barges will replace horse-drawn boats on the canals, and that in many instances these motor boats will offer a satisfactory alternative to the somewhat costly railway transportation.

valuable hints for their country's improvement. All this outlook has been falsified. Actual disgust has taken the place of admiration. The first and most striking feature of Western civilization is flagrant extravagance and luxury of living. In this respect the tourists appear to have been almost stupefied by what they observed. Enormous sums are spent upon the most ephemeral pleasures—upon costumes, cuisine, equipages, furniture, ornaments and every kind of luxury.

"In the next place the relations between the sexes shocked the mind of the orthodox Japanese. The state of affairs that he observed seemed to suggest universal immorality. Finally, the huge ego that takes one in the face in every page of the life of Western peoples struck Japanese visitors as incompatible with any strength of patriotism or any willingness to sacrifice oneself on the altar of country."

The great difficulty of the Japanese in understanding England and the English is to comprehend that in this country liberty in the relations between the sexes does not mean license. The woman of the West is allowed a much larger measure of freedom than her sister in the East. Even in enlightened Japan of to-day, women are still regarded as the inferior of man. This is a thing not argued about; it is taken for granted. It is the woman's lot to submit; the man's right to command. While Western civilization has modified customs very largely, it is still the general practice for the wife to walk after her husband, not with him, and for the father to put his male child foremost, and not his wife.

The way the Japanese women is kept in the background can be realized by visiting

A JAPANESE HOME.

There—save, again, in the case of families that are thoroughly European—the wife may be seen when you first go in, she may come and bow her farewells, but as a rule, she disappears while you are being entertained. She does not sit at the same table with you, and the men have the meal alone.

Now it can be understood that to the people of a nation where woman is kept in the secondary place, the position of woman in England seems monstrous. It impresses the Japanese visitor, often enough, as highly shocking and immoral. He may have tried to accustom himself to our modes of thought. He has not yet become acclimatized to our ideas of love. And one of the greatest difficulties found in educating the girls of the better classes in Japan to-day on Western lines is that the European ideas of love will come in, and will be absorbed through European literature, and through the unconscious influences of European and American teachers.

Apart from our odd ideas about love, the next thing that impresses the Japanese about us is our extravagance. He has been trained to live on very little. His is a very poor country, taxation is high, food is dear, money is scanty. He exists—and apparently thrives—often enough on sums which a beggar would scorn in England. Fat, milk, and meat are to him mere superfluous luxuries.

He is gradually acquiring more costly tastes, however. He is knowing us better, many of his are hard impressions of England are modified. Often enough he becomes a passionate admirer of our ideals of home life, of liberty, and of constitutional government. But even then it may be questioned if some doubts do not lie behind. He considers that we are over-individualistic, and that the freedom of the individual has been carried beyond the limits of safety imposed by the greater claims of the state. He will not have some of our institutions at any price. The jury system, for example, he considers an absurdity; and some of us are not sure that he is not right. He can not understand why we give such freedom to the agitator.

It would, of course, be possible to add to this article many beautiful and sincere attributes to the English character and ways paid by the Japanese.

NEW BATTLESHIPS.

British Builders are Busy with Foreign Orders.

It is stated in Glasgow that in addition to the two battleships and seven destroyers for which British firms have tendered recently the Admiralty has approached leading shipbuilders with respect to orders for other battleships. The fact that so many of the leading Scotch and English firms have entered into arrangements to reconstruct foreign navies, including the Russian, Turkish, and Spanish, is forcing the Admiralty to disclose its programme earlier than was anticipated.

British shipbuilders have such a large number of foreign contracts on hand that it would cause little surprise if some difficulty arose as to placing orders for this year's British ships.

Dreadnoughts for no fewer than four foreign Powers are under construction or on order in Great Britain, and the total number of foreign armored ships in which British firms are now interested is sixteen. This does not include ships building abroad, of which essential parts, such as guns or armor are being furnished from Great Britain.

The Turkish Government recently placed an order with the Armstrong-Vickers Syndicate for two first class dreadnoughts. It is understood, however, that this order was provisional, and it is possible in view of the war, that it will be cancelled or at least postponed.

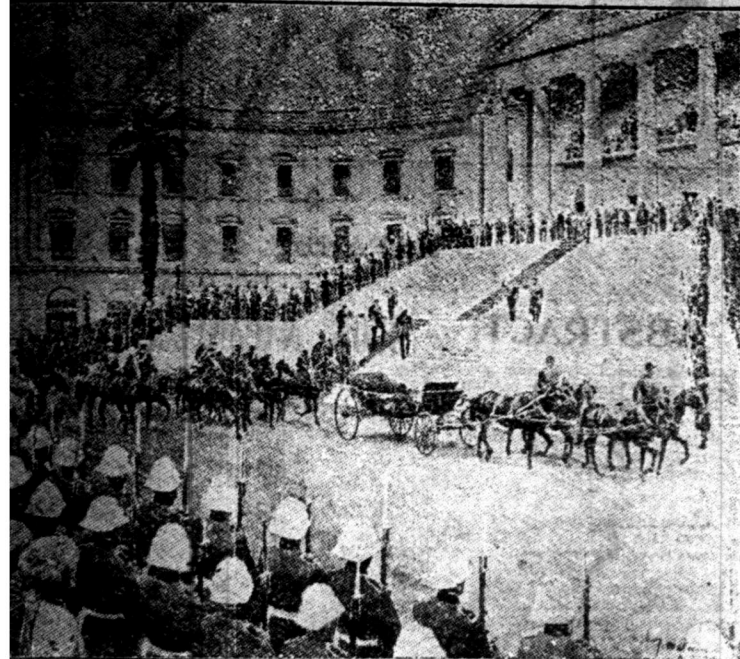

The Chilean Government, however, has recently ordered from Messrs. Armstrong, Whitworth & Co. two dreadnoughts and work on these is expected to begin at any moment. The same firm has on the stocks at Elswick the 27,500 ton Brazilian battleship Rio de Janeiro, while at Barrow Messrs. Vickers have the Japanese battle cruiser Kongo almost ready to launch.

Altogether there are twenty-four British and foreign dreadnoughts completing, building or about to be laid down in Great Britain.

JAPAN'S STREET PEDLERS

A COUNTLESS PROCESSION OF HAWKERS.

Medicine Men, Repairer of Bamboo Pipes and Vender of Sweets.

Passing and repassing through the streets of Tokio are vendors of every description. Early in the morning one's slumber is disturbed by their plaintive cries, and should the window of the house look upon a thoroughfare, there may be seen through the sudari a countless procession of hawkers, but they do not need to be seen to be recognized, for their characteristic cry echoes and echoes from morning until night.

Take the oichini, for instance, the strolling medicine vender. Often he is a musician with a tuneless accordion. Envious glances may be cast at his red and white epaulettes, his uniform and his cap. Many a youth, says the Japan Advertiser, might consider it the height of ambition to be able to go about the city in just the same manner and win smiles from all the young woman in the streets through which he passes. But the oichini has all he can do to make his daily bread, and his lot is often very hard indeed.

The centre for the distribution of this medicine is at the merchant's house, which is situated on the little island off Tsukiji, Tsukijima. The applicant who wishes to become a travelling apothecary must pay 5 yen as a guarantee to be faithful to the master. The next day he is given a cap, a suit of clothes and a pair of shoes. In addition he receives medicine to the value of 7 yen, and his breakfast is supplied every morning.

bowl and mouthpiece and put in a new bamboo stem, they clean the whole by steam and polish the metal until it seems as good as new.

Another personage among the street merchants is the Amazake-ya. His cry—Amai, Amai! Sweet, Sweet! is so suggestive of sweet things that the cry brings the children from every quarter. The men who ply this trade are generally old. They form one of Tokio's picturesque street elements with their two large red lacquered boxes on either end of

A SHOULDER POLE.

Amazake is sold to the street retailers from thirteen wholesale merchants who thus supply the trade.

An applicant who wishes to enter this business goes to the merchant with a person who acts as a guarantor, and borrowing the outfit, which consists of the aforesaid red boxes, is almost ready to set forth on his travels. But he must buy his own clothes, which consist of coolie nether garments and a blue cotton coat with the advertisement of his trade in white characters on its lapels and a Chinese character for Amazake on his back.

He must also be fitted out with an iron pot for boiling the sweet liquid. His red boxes contain the hibaschi and the heavy pot, also charcoal, drawers, trays and cups.

It is very hard for an old man to carry two such heavy boxes, and the Amazake-ya is often taken with a desire to rest by the wayside. But this is against the law, and if the policeman catches sight of him he is told to move on in the polite language of Kora! Kora! Sometimes he is fined from 20 sen to one yen for thus loitering on his way.

Like the proverbial milkman of Western countries who waters his milk, it must be confessed that the Amazake-ya has the reputation for diluting his liquid so that it is doubled and sometimes trebled in quantity. But then he only charges

The Transsaharan trade is practically at an end, but this spiritual or intellectual communication between Tripoli and Nigeria through these pilgrims remains.

The prospects of Tripoli in the future depend solely on agriculture. The hopes of mineral wealth in the soil are based on no solid ground; on the contrary Prof. Gregory and Mr. Pervinquier are definitely pessimistic about mining prospects in Cyrenarica and Tripoli respectively. No doubt something could be done by an enlightened administration to increase the fertility of the soil. But much capital would be required for construction of artesian wells and irrigation works, and there is great doubt whether the sanguine hopes entertained in some quarters are LIKELY TO BE REALIZED.

When I was in Tripoli last year a Frenchman obtained a concession to construct an artesian well outside the Meshia, but he abandoned the work when he had bored to a depth of 240 feet without finding any trace of water.

Some of the Roman writers speak in terms of high praise regarding the fertility of Tripoli, and many at the present day hold the opinion that the country may yet revert to its old glories under European guidance. But the prospects are less favorable when we consider the results of the careful investigations of Prof. Gregory, which lead him to the conclusion that the accounts of the ancient authors were not a little exaggerated. Then again some scientists hold that the present miserable condition of the country is due to climatic changes; further it is obvious to the most casual observer that the migrating dunes which have been allowed to invade the Jefara are a serious hindrance to any agricultural undertaking. Within a very few minutes walk of the southern border of the Meshia dunes can be seen rising to a height of about fifty feet.

Tripoli is known only in its broader features, and we may still class some parts of Fezan and of Cyrenarica among the unknown lands of Africa. Since 1880 a special firman has been required for any excursion extending beyond the immediate surroundings of the city of Tripoli. Considering the insecurity in some parts of the country and fearing that any accident which might happen to a traveller would cause friction with a foreign Power, the Turkish authorities thought it wisest to stop travel altogether. Apart from the coast the country has never been surveyed, and the existing maps are based mainly on the route sketches of DIFFERENT TRAVELLERS.

The correspondent of the Popolo Romano, a Ministerial organ, writing from Tripoli, evidently recognizes the facts as stated in the Geographical Journal by Dr. Vischer. He has the common sense to disillusion his fellow countrymen as to the immediate future of their new colony, which perverted southern writers in the early days of the war described as a land flowing with milk and honey and inhabited by a pacific and hospitable Arab population. He writes:

I left Rome with my heart full of the rosiest illusions, which were further increased during my journey across Sicily, where a legion of fortune seekers is anxiously

THE GRAVEYARD OF SHIPS

SHORES OF ST. GEORGE'S HARBOR, BERMUDA.

A Fleet of Decaying Hulks With Yawning Decks Lies on the Shore.

St. George's Harbor, Bermuda, bears a sinister reputation as the graveyard of the Atlantic, and its shores present a scene of melancholy and desolation not often equaled in her array of abandoned, rotting ships of all nations, nearly all of which in times past brought cargoes from far and wide to the great ports of the world.

Every year the fleet of decaying hulks, their ravaged and yawning decks and sides growing more dilapidated with the wear and tear of time, receives reinforcements in fresh victims. Such wholesome blight, such vast and hopeless dissolution, has a most depressing effect on the beholder.

The dismal scene, with gulls circling like vultures overhead, seems like death and despair personified, the end of all things, a chaos. Bermuda's cordon of pitiless, knife-like coral reefs extending twenty miles off shores on all sides yearly proves the undoing of many unfortunate, confused skipper, who by a slight deflection from their course stumble upon this deadly pitfall unguarded in mid-Atlantic.

CORAL REEFS WAGE CONTEST

With the rending, lacerating fangs of the jagged white ledges clutching a ship's bottom, her roaming of the seven seas may well be considered over. If wreckers succeed in freeing her from the sawlike, foam-covered barrier and floating her into harbor, salvation is not at all nigh. The cost of repairs is so prohibitive in Bermuda that her unhappy owners find themselves swamped by simple contemplation of them, and she is almost always sold for the benefit of all concerned.

At any rate her hull goes to mark another successful encounter in the conquest which Bermuda perpetually wages against the commerce of the world. After each week the shores of little St. George Harbor, or less frequently those of Hamilton, are littered with one more skeleton of a once magnificent ship, like the carcass of a huge animal picked clean by wolves. Wreckers either burn or break her up for the metal in her construction, or possibly, if her condition warrants, convert her into a coal hulk for harbor use.

RIBS IN THE SANDS.

Each ancient ruin recalls to the native thrilling incidents of fearful gales, shipwreck and destruction, while the disintegration of years has obliterated beneath the harbor the last reminders of yet other fine ships which have found their last resting place here in past ages.

Only a few blackened ribs showing at low tide tell the life story of the former American full-rigged ship George H. Warren, built at East Boston in 1864. Soon after being launched she was placed under German colors as protection from faithful to the master. The next day he is given a cap, a suit of clothes and a pair of shoes. In addition he receives medicine to the value of 7 yen, and his breakfast is supplied every morning. For his other meals he must shift for himself and eat them in whatever part of Tokio he finds himself.

WHEN HE BECOMES HUNGRY.

All the vendors must assemble at the master's house in the morning and be ready to start out by 8 o'clock for the Sô streets of Tokio. The oichini sings a song which has for conclusion the expression oichini, or one, two, keeping step to the music of an accordion and walking stately and slowly. Whenever the street kamins hear this song they run after the oichini, just as the rats ran after the mad piper of Hamelin.

His song is an advertisement of his medicine. It is difficult to learn and often takes several days before the vendor can master it. If he is not a success at singing the song he will be of no account as a vendor, for the secret of his popularity lies in his rendering of the peculiar melody.

When you hear the Ra-uya, or repairer of bamboo pipes, in the neighborhood, it seems as though a miniature locomotive was letting off steam, for one peculiarity of the Ra-uya's trade is a cart which has in it a little furnace, a steam vent over which the pipe is placed to clean it thoroughly on the inside and also through the roof of the cart a steam whistle.

For the privilege of pushing his cart through the streets the Ra-uya pay three yen a year as tax. It takes a long apprenticeship to know all the tricks of the trade and no one who is not accustomed to this kind of mending can be a success. The number of Ra-uya is steadily on the decrease, perhaps because there are fewer old fashioned people now who use this kind of pipe.

A FAMILIAR CRY.

In the old Yedo days the trade was a brisk one and the Ra-uya ran through the streets, two baskets slung at the ends of a pole across his shoulders and his cry was a most familiar one. Now he is minus the baskets and the cry, but the cart and the steam whistle have taken their place. Then, too, so many people to-day smoke cigars and cigarettes that the Ra-uya finds his old bamboo pipes few and far between. According to statistics those who use the pipe have fallen off considerably and the menders have decreased one-half in the past ten years. It is a sad commentary on the passing of many old style people.

In Tokio there are about fifteen merchants who sell the bamboo for the pipes, and the Chinese bamboo is considered the best. This business cannot be carried on when it is rainy, as the repairing must be done out of doors. The Ra-uya must be examined by the officers in his district twice a year.

It is his cart passes the examination he may continue his work. He charges three sen to replace a ninestem, and he must use about ten sen worth of charcoal a day, so that the profits accruing are often very small. This business is practically limited to old men. They take off the silver or brass

Western countries who waters his milk, it must be confessed that the Amazake-ya has the reputation for diluting his liquid so that it is doubled and sometimes trebled in quantity. But then he only charges one sen for a cup. And the musical sound of Amai! Amai! is such a pleasant one to the ears that the Amazake-ya may be forgiven for all remissness in his business.

FEW CHANGES IN TRIPOLI

NOT A LAND OF POSSIBILITY.

AS ITALY HAD HOPED.

Pessimistic Article by Dr. Vischer on the Trade Outlook There.

The Geographical Journal of London prints an article on Tripoli by Dr. Adolf Vischer, who, referring to the trans-Saharan trade, says:

In former days, when West Africa and its river were unknown to Europeans, Tripoli used to be the terminus of the traffic across the Sahara. The goods which arrived from Hausaland and the Niger countries were ostrich feathers, ivory, metals and skins and slaves. In exchange the productions of European markets were taken south. Since the middle of the last century this trade has gradually declined. First, the slave traffic was stopped by the European representatives in Tripoli and by the Turks. It has been said that slave traffic is still going on on the Benghazi-Wadai route, but it is difficult to test the truth of such assertions, as, in any case, the traffic is carried on secretly. Slaves were the most remunerative of the articles dealt with in the Trans-Saharan trade.

Then came the advent of European administration in Hausaland and the Niger countries. This, and the occupation of Tunis and Egypt by France and Great Britain, drove all independent tribes to the eastern Sahara, where they began to molest and

ROB THE CARAVANS.

Further, the shipping facilities were increased on the rivers Niger and Benue. The goods from Bornu and Kano were sent down to the Gulf of Guinea, whence they reach Europe in two weeks time. The new route was safer, shorter in time and less expensive than the 2,000 mile journey across the Sahara. A few figures may illustrate the decline witnessed during the last few years. The trade in ostrich feathers, valued in 1890 at £250,000, had fallen by 1905 to £12,000 while the figures for ivory are: 1890, £25,000; 1905, £1,500. The value of the goods sent to the south was £400,000 in 1894, but in 1906 only £70,000. To-day it is only the route from Benghazi to Wadai which is somewhat frequented, although it is a most difficult one. But, with the coming occupation of Wadai by the French, the trade of that country will probably take a western and southern direction.

Although the Sahara has lost its importance in the world's trade, it is, and will be, crossed by numbers of pious Moslems from the Mahomedan West African countries who undertake the pilgrimage to Mecca.

population. He writes: "I left Rome with my heart full of the rosiest illusions, which were further increased during my journey across Sicily, where a legion of fortune seekers was anxiously awaiting the moment to land in Tripoli. Well, my advice is 'Do not move from where you are.' At Tripoli now and for a long time to come there is nothing to attract or encourage initiative, work or small private capital."

He then points out that the aid of the Government and of large public companies will be required to make Tripoli productive. Three small Italian capitalists, the traveller with him full of hope are now only waiting for the first steamer to take them back to Italy thoroughly disheartened. Of the Arabs he says: "They are lazy, wretched, ragged, sickly, living on alms or by the humblest services," while all the retail trade is in the hands of the Jews and Maltese, whose aim is to spend as little as possible. He concludes with the prophecy that "at least twenty years will be required before Tripoli becomes a city able to give remunerative employment to small private capital."

KING OF PRUSSIA.

The Most Decorated Ruler in the World.

The German Kaiser is the most decorated personage in the world, and if he were to display all the orders and stars he is entitled to wear his entire person would be hidden. As King of Prussia William II. is head of every Prussian companionship, including, as the chief, that of the Black Eagle (the highest of all) the Red Eagle, the Knights of Jerusalem, the Order of the Crown, the Order of the Hohenzollern House, and the Ordre pour le Merite. Besides imperial and Prussian decorations he is entitled to wear those of almost all foreign orders of distinction. Among these are the English Order of the Garter, the Russian Order of St. Andrews, the Italian Order of the Annunciation, the Danish Order of the Elephant, the Swedish Order of the Seraphine, the Norwegian Order of the Lion and the Spanish Order of the Golden Fleece.

Foreign orders are only worn by the Kaiser in honor of a foreign guest or when he is in the country of the order. One of the decorations he most constantly displays is that known as the "Generals' Order," instituted in remembrance of the veteran officers who formed the staff of the old Emperor William. Hardly less of a favorite with him is the medallion commemorating his silver wedding with its "XXV." set in a silver wreath.

A VALUABLE CARPET.

During the forthcoming visit of King George to India there will be placed on exhibition a carpet owned by the Maharajah of Baroda. The carpet is a little more than 13 feet square, and in it rubies, diamonds and pearls are interwoven to form a beautiful scintillating pattern. These gems are estimated to be worth about $4,000,000. The Maharajah also owns the most famous diamond collar in existence. It contains 200 diamonds and is valued at more than $1,000,000.

ing at low tide tell the life story of the former American full-rigged ship George H. Warren, built at East Boston in 1864. Soon after being launched she was placed under German colors as protection from Confederate men-of-war, being renamed Ida. Under this and Norwegian ownership she continued for the greater part of her career. Ten years ago she got into trouble at Bermuda and was purchased by new owners there, who wished to replace her under the American flag. Legal complications arose in the way of this step, however, and as a final result the Ida, instead of resuming the cargo trade, was burned for junk.

In the upper end of the harbor are the remains of the one-time bark Lillian, built at Harrington, Me., in 1873, and sold to New York parties shortly before she stranded on the reefs two years ago, while inward bound with coal. After being floated into smooth water it was found that the terrible battering had unfitted her for further use, and she was beached and stripped.

BEAUTIFUL BUT TERRIBLE.

Nestling close beside the Lillian is the Gloucester fisherman Priscilla, to all outward appearances as good as new, but never again to sail. A year or more ago she was sent there to fish on grounds supposed to exist northwest of Bermuda, it being the plan of the promoters to ship her catch regularly to New York by steamer. The Priscilla's only noteworthy achievement was striking the reefs, after which the enterprise was abandoned.

The destructive powers of the beautiful coral reefs was never better evidenced than in the ruination of the fine steel bark Filippo Benegri, their last victim. Bound from Montevideo to New York with a cargo of bones, she went to her doom some ten miles off shore in December last. Wrecking tugs eventually succeeded in bringing her into St. Georges, still white of side and symmetrical of spar, only 18 years old, but actually fit for little more than the junk heap. She is ending her days in lightering coal about the harbor.

Tragedy veils the mystery of the Russian bark Passat, of Helsingfors, which, abandoned, was picked up at sea by a British steamer nine years ago and towed into Bermuda. No trace of the crew has ever been found. The Passat was formerly a Norwegian vessel, built at Arendal in 1878, her name meaning Trade Winds. She is now in use as a coal hulk.

CHOLERA REMEDIES.

The Constantinople correspondent of the Lancet gives the following Turkish cholera remedies prescribed by old-fashioned Ottomans during the recent epidemic: (1) Drink infusion of juniper berries; (2) carry with you an agate stone or on your neck a stone of hyacinth; (3) never fail to have in your pocket a bone of a dead child; (4) masticate pimpermel; and (5) since cholera is mostly caused by the moon, drink decoctions of laurel fruit when the planet Mars or Mercury is in the ascendant, as these planets are the enemies of the moon.

Manufacturers of Paper, Pulp and Timber

First Mortgage Five Per Cent.
Sinking Fund Gold Bonds

Due November 1st, 1940

Interest Payable Half-Yearly

PRICE TO YIELD 6% ON THE INVESTMENT

We consider that these Bonds present an exceptional opportunity for absolutely safe and most remunerative investment on account of the strong features following:

First—The convertible nature of the Company's assets, consisting of 6,000 square miles of pulp and timber lands distributed throughout the Province of Quebec. These properties could to-day be subdivided and sold in the open market for almost twice the amount of the First Mortgage Bonds. The timber limits are fully insured with Lloyds of London, England, against loss through forest fires.

Second—The net earnings from the Company's present business are equal to approximately twice the amount required for payment of interest on the First Mortgage Bonds. The new paper and pulp mills now in course of construction will double this earning power.

Third—The First Mortgage Bonds can to-day be purchased at a substantial discount price and they are retired by a Sinking Fund capable of redeeming practically the entire issue at 102½ and interest by yearly drawings.

100 KILLED AND INJURED

The Bibby Oil Coke Mills, Liverpool, Totally Wrecked by an Explosion.

A despatch from Liverpool, England, says: Forty-three workers are known to have been killed and upwards of 100 others injured by a boiler explosion which occurred on Friday at the oil coke mills of J. Bibby & Sons. The force of the explosion was so terrific that the roof of the great mill was blown off, while the walls split and crumbled, and the bodies of the victims hurtled high into the air mingled with the flashes of flames which instantly followed the bursting of the boilers. Nearly 600 workers were engaged in the working at the time. Every man was hurled to the ground through the violence of the explosion. Those in the near vicinity of the boiler-room had their arms and legs torn off, and their horribly mangled bodies fell into the adjoining streets together with the showers of brick and debris. Fire immediately broke out and the whole building was soon in flames. Men frantically appealing for help could be seen at every window with fire raging behind them. Fire escapes were quickly on the scene and many of the men were saved. The scorched clothing and burned hair of those brought down told of the terrible ordeal through which they had gone. Many of those who were taken to the hospital are suffering from shocking injuries. Some of them have lost legs and arms and others are fearfully burned, so that many of them are not expected to recover.

ITALIANS ARE HEMMED IN

A Correspondent Says They Are Besieged
By the Turks.

A despatch from Paris, says: That the town of Tripoli is virtually besieged by the Turks, and that Homs is in on better situation, is the opinion of a correspondent of The Temps, who has succeeded in joining the Ottoman forces near Zouagher. He telegraphs regarding the Turkish side of the war, and says it is certain that after a month and a half of war, after large expenditures and serious losses, the Italians are no farther advanced than on the day following their disembarkation. If the Turkish forces are inferior in numbers to the Italians, they make up in confidence what they lack in numbers. "I expected to find disorder and discouragement. On the contrary, everywhere I met order, discipline and contentment. Patient and ready for everything, the Turkish soldiers is accepting all without complaint. If he suffers he knows it is for the Empire of Islam, while the Arab knows that if he dies paradise with Mohammed will be his."

The food of the Turkish army is frugal but sufficient. Arms are adequate, many carrying rifles captured from the enemy. The correspondent did not find any dissensions among the Arabs and the Turks. The Arabs, whose forces had just been swelled by the fierce, war-loving natives of Misrata, are most enthusiastic, insisting that they should be marched towards Tripoli to recapture it.

The correspondent is unable to divulge the numbers or plans of defence and offence of the Turks, merely saying that their foreign military attaches must have made helpful observations.

SHIPMENT OF MILK.

Board Makes Order Respecting Handling and Return of Cans.

A despatch from Ottawa says: An order of great interest to farmers has been issued by the Railway Commission as a result of an application made on June 22 by the Montreal Milk Shippers' Association. This provides that every can shipped must have the owner's name stenciled on it, and covers firmly attached. They must all be loaded on the cars by shippers, and the empty ones will be returned by the railway companies without extra charge. If there are under twenty empty cans the railway will unload these; if there are under forty the shipper must supply one man to aid; if there are over forty the shipper must supply two. If any train is delayed over thirty minutes the trainmen must load the milk. After the 1st of September next year the railway companies will not be forced to take any can less than eight gallons.

EXPRESS PACKAGE STOLEN.

Contained $5,000, and Disappeared
While Clerk Was Absent.

A despatch from Regina, says: An express package, said to contain about $5,000, was stolen from the office of the Canadian Northern Express Company about 3.30 a.m. on Thursday. The night clerk, a man named Cameron, was absent from the office but a few seconds, when he returned to find the package gone. Nothing else was disturbed, and the only person about was a brakeman, who was sitting on a chair near the safe. The Mounted Police and the city police were both notified. No arrests have been made.

SITUATION STILL GRAVE.

Germany Awaits Explanation By Great Britain.

A despatch from Cologne, Germany, says: Foreign Secretary Von Kiderlen-Waechter's explanation leaves no doubt that an Anglo-German clash was imminent in July, according to an apparently inspired despatch from Berlin in the Cologne Gazette, which adds: "The acute crisis is past, but the situation remains grave. Germany awaits with even greater tension Great Britain's coming explanation. Upon this will depend the relations of the two countries in the future—whether they are to be distrustful and unfriendly or whether a better understanding will be brought about. Germany is reluctant to believe in the possibility that a war could be brought about overnight between two great powers without a real question being at issue, but later events have spoken only too clearly."

FAILURE OF HARVEST.

Russian Peasantry are Said to be in Dire Straits.

A despatch from London says: The St. Petersburg correspondent of the Daily Telegraph describes the situation among the Russian peasantry, which has resulted from the failure of the harvest, as very serious. The famine is reported to be worse than that of 1901, when foreign subscriptions were raised to relieve the sufferings of the people. The correspondent not only condemns the Government's restrictions on the efforts of benevolent people who are not allowed to do anything except through the military and Red Cross Society.

BITTEN BY TARANTULA.

Miss Connor Had to Have Wound Cauterized.

A despatch from London, Ont., says: Miss Connor, sister of Mr. J. A. Connor, Richmond street, grocer, was bitten by a tarantula while picking bananas off a bunch in the store on Wednesday, and for a time it was feared that the result would prove serious. Miss Connor was bitten on the finger and underwent the most excruciating pain. She was attended by a physician, who opened and burned the wound. The spider was captured and measures about four inches in diameter and two inches in length.

CLOSING ROUND NANKING.

Rebel Forces Determined to Take the Stronghold.

A despatch from Nanking says: After more than half a century of silence, the hills overlooking the walled capital of China, swam with rebellious forces eager for its occupation and determined to take the stronghold where the Manchus are making their last stand south of the Yangtze. From the Tiger Hill fort for several hours on Sunday morning big guns spoke repeatedly, while farther up along the north-eastern range from the top of Purple Mountain, overlooking the Ming Tombs, for a fifteen mile semicircle westward to the Yangtze, smaller forts scattered shells into every section of the city. So far as is known the casualty list is not large. General Weng, second in command of the defenders, is among those killed.

Armored Ship Moltke Exceeds Her Contract Speed.

A despatch from Danzig, Germany, says: The armored cruiser Moltke, a sister ship of the Von Der Tann, is said to have attained a speed of thirty knots an hour over a measured mile here on Thursday. Her turbine engines developed 50,000 horse power, her contract calling for only 45,000. On the previous trial she made twenty-nine and one-half knots.

PIRATES BOARDED STEAMER.

Cut Off the Legs of Two Chinese Passengers on Board.

A despatch from Hong Kong says: Pirates held up the British steamship Shiu on the West River, killed the chief officer and cut off the legs of two of the Chinese passengers, and then looted the vessel. Pirates also held up the Chinese steamer Kwong Yuen and stole $190,000. Owing to the prevalence of piracy British river steamers have suspended service. Two British torpedo boats will patrol the West River.

GOLD NEAR BRANTFORD.

Discovery Made While Boring for Oil in Onondaga Township.

A despatch from Brantford says: Some excitement has been caused here by the alleged discovery of gold by the Pleasant Ridge Syndicate in Onondaga Township, of whom Thomas Cox is the chief promoter. It is claimed a vein was struck twelve feet below the ground while drilling operations for oil were in progress. An analysis of the specimen found shows that it may lead to important discoveries.

Duke of Connaught Declines to Interfere With Sentence.

A despatch from Ottawa says: On the advice of the Cabinet, his Royal Highness the Duke of Connaught has declined to interfere in the sentence of death passed upon James A. A despatch from Calcutta says: The steamship Beachey, from London, is stranded at Minicoy. She has aboard a large consignment of articles for use in the Durbar at Delhi. These include the harness for King George's horses, many women's gowns and men's uniforms and four hundred cases of fireworks. It is improbable that any of these articles will reach Delhi in time for the ceremonies.

THE RISE IN TEA PRICES.

One of our reporters has interviewed Mr. Melville, the chief representative of Thomas J. Lipton for Canada and the United States, who, when asked for the cause of the increase in price of tea, said: "The day of good tea at a cheap price has passed by, more particularly of British-grown teas, their increasing popularity has created a greater demand than the supply. Russia and Australia are buying tremendously of these instead of China, the consumption in Great Britain is larger than ever, the shutting out of over 15 million pounds of colored China green tea by the United States, the larger use of tea due to high coffee prices, the growth of rubber in Ceylon, the shortage in the Japan crop this year and the labor problem in tea-growing countries, all these factors account for the much higher primary markets, and the present revolution in China may mean smaller Chinese crops next year. It either means lower quality at the same prices or the same quality at higher prices, and our experience shows the public prefer the latter. The future indications are for still higher prices. Even with the advance in price, tea will still be by far the cheapest popular beverage."

WORK FROM SMALL POWER

Can Run Street Cars With Current Found in Telephone Circuit.

A despatch from New York says: The most recent invention that Prof. M. I. Hupin, of Columbia University, expects to spring on the world was spoken of by him at Wednesday's meeting of the National Academy of Sciences, in the lecture-room of the new library. He said he was not ready to go into the particulars just then, but by the next meeting of the Academy in April he would be prepared to explain to the scientists how he could get incredible amounts of work done by the use of small quantities of electricity. The machine that would do this, said the professor, had been discovered almost through accident and in fact his first one was broken into bits at the first application of a small current. As an example of the utility of his machine, he spoke of running street cars with the current which was found in a telephone circuit. The principle had not been known before, he was sure.

MAKING SAFE INVESTMENTS

MUNICIPALS HAVE NO GREAT PROSPECT OF APPRECIATION, BUT ARE READILY CONVERTIBLE INTO CASH.

The "Yield" Basis on Which Bonds are Usually Sold Eliminate a Great Part of Prospective Appreciation—Stable in Price Owing to Fact That They are Unaffected by General Conditions—Recapitulation.

The articles contributed by "Investor" are for the sole purpose of guiding prospective investors, and, if possible of saving them from losing money through placing it in "wild-cat" enterprises. The impartial and reliable character of the information may be relied upon. The writer of these articles and the publisher of this paper have no interests to serve in connection with this matter other than those of the reader.

(By Investor.)

When one buys an investment, strictly speaking, one looks merely at the rate of income. Prospect of appreciation, when present to a high degree, usually indicates danger, perhaps remote—in the extent of realization not measuring up to anticipation of severe loss from a drop in value. An investment should be free from any such danger. As a rule, really high-class investments altogether fail to take into consideration prospect of appreciation, and, of course, as the better class of municipal bonds are strictly "gilt-edged" investments, the question of appreciation is one very remote from the thoughts of the average investor who buys this class of security. To be sure, they are by no means as rigid in value as real estate mortgages, but they are not likely to any extent to appreciate in market price. In the first place, they are usually sold on the basis of their "yield." One buys City of Toronto 4 per cent. bonds to yield 3.95 per cent., and then by the aid of tables which every bond dealer has—and most bond buyers—the price is worked out afterwards. As was pointed out in an early article in this series, "yield" represents the taking into consideration, in the return on the investments, the gain—where the bonds are sold below par or the loss where a price greater than par is paid—resulting from the purchase at 95, say, and the ultimate redemption of the bonds at par. At the risk of being tiresome, it may be pointed out shortly that when purchasing a bond due a year hence at 99, the purchaser receives 100 at the end of the year. He thus makes 1 per cent on his purchase. If the bond pays 4 per cent, the "yield" on the investment is not 4.00 divided by 99 or 4.04 per cent., as in the case of a stock which is never redeemed, but 400 divided by 99 + 1, or 5.04 per cent. So that the prospect of appreciation in purchasing a bond at 95 due to its redemption at par is duly taken care of in the "yield." On the other hand, the growth of a city whose bonds formerly sold on a 5 per cent. basis may make these bonds appreciate so in value that a 4 1/2 per cent basis is the proper price, and in that way an investor may make through appreciation. But as a rule, however, this element is one that has a decidedly unimportant place in the handling of municipal bonds.

The question of convertibility into cash, however, is very different. The great safety of municipal bonds make them so desirable a security for loans that bankers will loan on them at a rate from one-half to 1 per cent., lower than they loan on security of shares of stock in a sound company, and at the same time require only about one-fourth the margin. So

REMEDY FOR CAR SHORTAGE.

Oblige Railways to Keep Car Order Book at all Stations.

A despatch from Ottawa says: The Railway Commission on Tuesday, December 5th, will consider the matter of requiring all railway companies under the jurisdiction of the board to provide at all stations a car order book, in which a record must be kept showing particulars of all cars ordered and allotted, also the advisability of requiring all orders for cars to be made in person by shippers or their agents, by mail or by telegraph, giving particulars of cars required to the agent in charge of the station from which shipment is made. This is the outcome of the many complaints made recently to the commission by shippers about the shortage of cars. A decision may be given which will remedy the matter.

WHOOPIING COUGH EPIDEMIC.

Contagious Children's Malady Breaks Out in a School.

A despatch from Grimsby says: What is believed to be an epidemic of whooping cough is running riot among the school children in this village, and no less than 23 families have withdrawn their boys and girls from the school, owing to the belief that they are infected with this malady. County Constable Swazie and a local medical man are investigating the circumstances, and may possibly decide to close the school as a result.

their safety is great, both as regards principal and interest.

Their rate of income is low for the most part, but high as compared with other forms of investment in other countries of equal security.

They are readily convertible into cash.

They have little prospect of appreciation in value, but are not like mortgages in this respect, which have absolutely none. And finally,

Their market price is stable to an unusual degree for securities unquoted or exchanges which, in some cases, suffer severe fluctuations without reason.

Certainly, after taking account of these considerations, municipal bonds—and this includes provincial and Dominion government obligations as well—are a very desirable form of investment for estates and trustees, and particularly for women whose sole source of income is derived from investments, and whose comfort and livelihood may depend on the safety of their capital.

A despatch from Rome says: General Caneva reports that the Italian losses since the commencement of the war at Tripoli, Homs, Benghazi, Derna and Tobruk have been 600 killed, and 1,000 wounded. He regards 75,000 men as the absolute minimum for the army of occupation. Gen. Caneva estimates the Turkish losses at 6,000 killed and the same number made prisoners. The bodies of five Italian soldiers have been found beyond the entrenchment at Tripoli. Three of the bodies were beheaded and the corpses were mutilated.

BONDS PAY BETTER INTEREST ON YOUR MONEY

¶ In point of security and interest return, the small investor in bonds is on the same footing as the institution or individual with thousands or tens of thousands to invest.

¶ Until Bonds in their present form were devised, it was not an easy thing to find an investment, safe, easily convertible into cash, and simple in form, and yielding as high as 6 per cent. interest.

¶ It is a matter of importance to you to know that we generally have on hand bonds in denominations of $100 and upwards, paying interest of from 4½ to 6 per cent.

¶ These are seasoned securities, bonds that have demonstrated their ability to pay interest and principal.

¶ If you have any money, no matter what the amount, earning less than this, you should ask us how to re-invest it in a way to afford better interest with as good, or better security.

CHILDREN INJURED.

Ordinary Cathartics and Pills and Harsh Physic Cause Distressing Complaints.

You cannot be over-careful in the selection of medicine for children. Only the very gentlest bowel medicine should ever be given, except in emergency cases. Ordinary pills, cathartics and purgatives are apt to do more harm than good. They may cause griping, nausea and other distressing after-effects that are frequently health-destroying.

We personally recommend and guarantee Rexall Orderlies as the safest and most dependable remedy, which we know, for constipation and associate bowel disorders. We have such absolute faith in the virtues of this remedy that we sell it on our guarantee of money back in every instance where it fails to give entire satisfaction, and we urge all in need of such medicine to try it at our risk.

Rexall Orderlies are eaten just like candy, are particularly prompt and agreeable in action, may be taken at any time, day or night; do not cause diarrhoea, nausea, griping, excessive looseness, or other undesirable effects. They have a very mild but positive action upon the organs with which they come in contact, apparently acting as a regulative tonic upon the relaxed muscular coat of the bowel, thus overcoming weakness, and aiding to restore the bowels to more vigorous and healthy activity.

Rexall Orderlies completely relieve constipation, except of course when of a surgical character. They also tend to overcome the necessity of constantly taking laxatives to keep the bowels in normal condition. Three sizes of packages, 10 cents, 25 cents, and 50 cents. Remember, you can obtain Rexall Remedies in Napanee only at our store — The Rexall Store, T. B. Wallace, Napanee.

Kingston Standard, (Conservative.)

We must not be intimidated into silence on this subject because, for sooth, the charge may be laid against us that our opposition is based upon racial prejudice or sectarian bigotry, as The News has well put it. Such a charge will not justly lie. There is neither prejudice nor bigotry back of the campaign against bi-lingualism. This campaign is based on higher and nobler grounds — on the desire to perpetuate the English language for the people of an English Province.

DIVORCE IN ANCIENT ROME.

One Woman Had Eight Husbands in Five Years.

"We are assured by Seneca," says the historical Inge, "that there were women in ancient Rome who counted their ages not by their years, but by the husbands they had had. Juvenal tells of one woman who had married eight husbands in five years. Divorce was granted on the slightest pretext. Many separated merely from love of change, disdaining to give any reason, like Aemilius Paulus, who told his friends that 'he knew best where his shoes pinched him'."

"Rich wives were not much sought after by wise men. Their complete emancipation made them difficult to manage. Accordingly, since both rich and poor wives were objectionable, the large majority of men never married at all. In most cases a Roman bridegroom knew practically nothing of his wife's character until after marriage."

PRESS COMMENTS.

Brantford Expositor.

Thousands of Ontario children are not being taught a word of English. Think of it! This under a Government that raved about Imperialism for the first three weeks in September.

Kingston Whig.

The manufactures are demanding recognition from the Government. They want the iron bounties to continue. And Mr. Borden looks serenely and promises to think over it. He'll surrender. Nothing surer.

Stratford Herald

Since eastern Ontario is now over-represented with thirteen Senators, the next six vacancies in eastern Ontario should in fairness be transferred five to western Ontario and one to northern Ontario.

London Advertiser.

Sir James Whitney says that "no such thing as a bi-lingual school exists in Ontario." Perhaps he means that the so-called bi-lingual schools as a rule equip the pupil with only one language, which is not English.

Manitoba Free Press.

The money taken out of the pockets of the people of this country by the exorbitant prices of cement is divided between the cement manufacturers and the railways. Lower customs duties, and lower railway rates as well, are the only effective remedies.

Montreal Herald.

How does Sovereign Grand Master Sproule of the Orange Order think the campaign against bi-lingual schools is going to be fanned into flame if it is known that Mr. Speaker Sproule of the House of Commons is running a private school of his own to become proficient in French?

Listowel Banner.

Why is it considered necessary to employ Dr. Marchant to inquire into an illegality? The ways of Governments are past finding out, and the entanglements into which the Whitney Government have brought education would provide enough conundrums to last through the Christmas season.

Brockville Recorder.

The bi-lingual school question is a scarecrow which is having a laughable effect on Conservative aspirants in Toronto. Hon. Dr. Pyne says there must not be bi-lingual schools and Hon. Mr. Foy says there cannot be such in Ontario. Funny that they exist after these Ministers have been in office for seven years.

been killed through accident in Canada during the last ten years, and yet a bill to provide adequate compensation, introduced into the House by a Liberal during a recent session, was rejected by the Premier, who is "investigating" the matter. Workmen's compensation modelled after the English system is an important plank in Leader Rowell's platform.

Toronto News.

The prime duty of the Ontario schools, whether public or separate, and in every section of the province, is to give the pupils a thorough knowledge of English, so that when they face the world they can have a wide and open market for their labor. And this does not interfere, and cannot interfere in any way with the rights of French-Canadians. The tongue of the minority may be an accomplishment. But English is necessary in Ontario, in Canada, in the United States and in Britain. The Ontario school system must not be allowed to become the tool of an organized race propaganda.

London Advertiser.

There must be searchings of heart among sincere conservatives in Ontario who give attention to the debates at Ottawa. The leader of the government who ardently advocated the immediate construction of a Canadian navy in Canadian shipyards two years ago, has already consented to the destruction of the project, in obedience to his nationalist allies. A French-Canadian premier had won a majority of his compatriots to a great step toward imperial co-operation, against the malignant opposition of his enemies in Quebec. That step is now to be retraced by an English-Canadian premier. He adds insult to injury by calling to his councils men who have tried to embitter French-Canadians against Great Britain, and to fix in their minds a prejudice against any form of naval expenditure. The cup of humiliation for English conservatives is filled to the brim. It was put to their lips by Mr. Monk in his speech in the house. His boast that his own opinions on the navy question had been accepted by Mr. Borden was the crowning mortification. Mr. Borden had to swallow the bitter draught. Bitter it must be to every conservative who has a taste for something besides the sweets of office.

PURIFIED HIS BLOOD

Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills
Healed Mr. Wilson's Sores

When the sewers of the body—bowels, kidneys and skin ducts—get clogged up, the blood quickly becomes impure and frequently sores break out over the body. The way to heal them, as Mr. Richard Wilson, who lives near London, Ont., found, is to purify the blood. He writes:

"For some time I had been in a low, depressed condition. My appetite left me and I soon began to suffer from indigestion. Quite a number of small sores and blotches formed all over my skin. I tried medicine for the blood and used many kinds of ointments, but without satisfactory results. What was wanted was a thorough cleansing of the blood, and I looked about in vain for some medicine that would accomplish this.

At last Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills were brought to my notice, and they are one of the most wonderful medicines I have ever known. My blood was purified in a very short time, sores healed up, my indigestion vanished. They always have a place in my home and are looked upon as the family remedy."

Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills cleanse the system thoroughly. Sold by all dealers at 25c a box.

A BALLOON THAT FAILED.

It Was to Have Startled Paris in 1834, But It Refused.

A dirigible balloon, L'Aigle, was to have made a journey from the Champ de Mars on Aug. 17, 1834. The poetic wording of the prospectus is in itself a curiosity, and the aerostat also was not wanting in interest. It was forty meters long—that is, 130 feet—and fifteen in width—that is, forty-eight feet nine inches. It had the form of a monster sea fish and was inflated with hydrogen.

Within was a second envelope, which, with the aid of pumps, compressed or rarefied the air for ascending or descending, as the case might be. At the extremities were two great "roues a ailettes" for steering purposes.

There was no motor, and the navigators had to work the machinery with their hands. The car of wicker was described as a marvel of comfort, with seats for ten persons. The dirigible was to have made its ascent with the two aeronauts, MM. Lenon and Edam, who were to have been accompanied by their wives.

The prospectus of the 1834 dirigible informed the public that the inventor had constructed two years ago at Montmartre a monster machine which he raised one night far away from curious eyes to study its capabilities, but the result was not equal to his expectations. To-day, after great improvements, the apparatus was ready for victory.

Coquelin Made the Audience Wait. The architect Binet was a friend of the elder Coquelin. He delighted to speak of a performance of "Cyrano de Bergerac" in which he went to praise the genial actor in his dressing room between acts.

"I admire you above all," he said to the actor, "in the couplets of the 'Cadets of Gascony.'"

At that moment word came to Coquelin that the curtain was rising for the next act.

"Wait, wait!" exclaimed Coquelin. "Leave me here alone with Binet." "My friend," he said to the architect, "it is with pleasure that I am now going to repeat the passage which has pleased you. For me your approbation is worth more than the plaudits of the whole house."

And while the audience waited he gave anew for Binet alone the "Cadets of Gascony."—Cri de Paris.

A Famous Walking Match.

Thomas Bailey Aldrich was one of the characters made notable in a celebrated walking match which was got up by Dickens during his second visit to America. The match was a stretch of about six miles over the Boston milldam toward Newton Center. In the articles of agreement the signatures were stated to be:

The Boston Bantam.....J. R. Osgood
Massachusetts Jemmy.....James T. Fields
The Gadshill Gasper.....Charles Dickens

At the dinner given by the contestants at the Parker House, in Boston, after the fatigues of the match were over there were present besides the above:

Hyperion.....H. W. Longfellow
Hosea Biglow.....J. R. Lowell
The Autocrat.....O. W. Holmes
The Bad Boy.....T. B. Aldrich

Remembered the Accent.

"Queen Mary," said the teacher to the class in the history lesson, "loved France so much that she declared 'Calais' would be found written across her heart after she was dead."

Pausing a moment, the teacher looked at a boy steadily.

"Jimmy Smith," she said, "you were not listening."

"Oh, yes, I was," Jimmy replied. "Well, what did Queen Mary say would be found written across her heart?"

"Kelly," was little Jimmy's triumphant reply.—Exchange.

I Am Willing To Prove I Can Cure You

To That End I Am Giving Away $10,000 Worth of Medicine

In order to show beyond all doubt that I am in possession of a medicine that will cure kidney trouble, bladder trouble or rheumatism, I will this year give away ten thousand dollars' worth of this medicine, and anyone suffering from these diseases can get a box of it absolutely free. All that is necessary is to send me your address.

I don't mean that you are to use a part of it or all of it and pay me if cured. I mean that I will send you a box of this medicine absolutely free of charge, a gift from me to the Uric Acid sufferers of the world, so I can show them where and how they may be cured. I will not expect payment for this free medicine, nor would I accept it now or later if you sent it. It is free in the real meaning of the word.

For twenty-five years—a quarter of a century—I have been trying to convince the public that I have something genuine, something better than others have for the cure of stubborn, chronic rheumatism, for torturing kidney backache, for annoying calls to urinate. But it is hard to convince people—they try a few things unsuccessfully and give up all hope and refuse to listen to anyone thereafter. Happily, I am in a position now to demonstrate to sufferers at my own expense that I have a medicine that cures these diseases. I don't ask them to spend any money to find out; I don't ask them to believe me, nor even to take the word of reliable people, but all I ask is that they allow me to send them the medicine at my own cost. That is surely fair.

To this end I have set aside ten thousand dollars, which will be used to compound my medicine. Much of it is ready now to be sent out, all of it fresh and standard. There will be enough for all sufferers, though there be thousands of them. And anyone who needs it can get some of it free. But in order that I shall know that you have a disease for which this medicine is intended, I ask you to send me some of your leading symptoms. If you have any of the symptoms in the list printed here you need my medicine and if you will write me I will gladly send you a box of it free with full directions for your use. Look the symptoms over, see which symptoms you have, then write me about as follows: "Dear Dr. I notice symptoms number"—here put down the numbers, give your age, full address, and send it to me. My address is Dr. T. Frank Lynott, 837 Franklin Building, Toronto, Can.

The ten thousand dollars I am spending for the compounding of my medicine is only a part of the money I am devoting to this cause, for the package of medicine I send you will be fully prepaid at my expense. From any standpoint you view it, YOU incur no expense or obligation. Just tell others who you know are suffering who sent you the medicine that cured you.

I am promising to give away ten thousand dollars' worth of medicine, and I will do that; I am promising to send any sufferer who writes me a box of this medicine and full directions free of charge, and I will do that.

great improvements, the apparatus was ready for victory. This would be achieved in the presence of a great concourse of spectators, and the inventor and his wife, with several people, would make the ascent. Given favorable wind, two hours would be sufficient for the journey to London, which is ninety-eight leagues from Paris. The itinerary was indicated with great precision.

But in spite of the magnificent promises and after the expenditure of great trouble and energy the apparatus was got to the Champ de Mars, but beyond that it would not move. The crowd was enraged and smashed the machine.—Paris Letter.

High Finance.

"What makes him look so solemn? He gets his month's salary tomorrow."

"That's just the trouble. His wife and his mother-in-law allow him 50 cents a week out of it, and he's trying to make up his mind to strike for a dollar!"—Atlanta Constitution.

Balked.

"You got a raise in pay, didn't you?" "Yes, but it didn't do me any good."

"Why not?" "I talk in my sleep, and my wife found out about it."—Toledo Blade.

DR. T. FRANK LYNOTT who is giving away $10,000 worth of medicine.

I can say further that this medicine has been vouched for according to law as complying in every detail with all requirements. It will stop rheumatism, it will stop pain and backache, it will stop too frequent desire to urinate; it will heal, soothe and strengthen. You will be better in every way for having taken it. There is not an ingredient that can injure; not one but will benefit. All that I ask is that you use it yourself so that you may be personally convinced.

Owing to the large number of requests, I have had ten thousand more copies of my medical book printed. This book is new and up to date and contains complete descriptions, symptoms, causes, effects and cures of kidney, bladder and rheumatic diseases. All who write for the free medicine will be sent a copy of this grand illustrated medical book—the largest ever written on these diseases for free and general distribution.

If you need medicine such as I have, if you are anxious to be cured and don't want to spend any money LOOKING for cures, write me. Read the symptoms over and let me hear from you today.

These Are the Symptoms:

- 1—Pain in the back.
- 2—Too frequent desire to urinate.
- 3—Burning or obstruction of urine.
- 4—Pain or soreness in the bladder.
- 5—Prostatic trouble.
- 6—Gas or pain in the stomach.
- 7—General debility, weakness, dizziness.

ANCIENT ARITHMETIC.

Problems Schoolboys Had to Solve Thirty-six Centuries Ago.

There is a ray of vindictive comfort for the modern schoolboy in the fact that for over 3,600 years his schoolboy progenitors have been worried by just such problems in arithmetic as annoy him most.

Among the archaeological discoveries made in Egypt is a papyrus roll, in excellent condition, dating from about 1700 B. C. This roll, which had a long heading beginning, "Directions how to attain the knowledge of all dark things," proves beyond doubt that the Egyptians of that time had a thorough knowledge of the elements of arithmetic.

Numerous examples show that their principal operations with units and fractions were made by means of addition and multiplication. Subtraction and division were not known in their present form, but correct results were obtained nevertheless.

Equations are also found in the papyrus. Here is one that brings the Egyptian schoolboy home to us:

Ten measures of barley are to be divided among ten persons in such manner that each subsequent person shall receive one-eighth less than the one before him.

Another example given is: There are seven men; each one has seven cats; each cat has eaten seven mice; each mouse has eaten seven grains of barley; each grain of barley would have yielded seven measures of barley. How much barley has been lost?

The papyrus also contains the calculation of the area of a circle, attempts to square the circle and finally calculations of the cubic measurements of pyramids.—New York Tribune.

The Range of Vision.

Data have been gathered in Germany with reference to the distance at which persons may be recognized by their faces and figures. If one has good eyes, the Germans claim, one cannot recognize a person whom he has seen but once before at a greater distance than twenty-five meters (eighty-two feet). If the person is well known to one, one may recognize him at from fifty to a hundred meters, and if it is a member of one's family, even at 150 meters. The whites of the eyes may be seen at from twenty-seven to twenty-eight meters and the eyes themselves at seventy-two to seventy-three meters. The different parts of the body and the slightest movements are distinguishable at ninety-one meters. The limbs show at 182 meters. At 540 meters a moving man appears only as an indefinite form, and at 720 meters (2,361.6 feet) the movements of the body are no longer visible.—Scientific American.

EXPERT TESTIMONY.

A Case Where Two Infallibles Held Conflicting Opinions.

The fallibility of expert testimony, which under stress of clever cross examination tends to the too decided statement, is amusingly revealed in "Science and the Criminal," a book by C. Ainsworth Mitchell, the head of the inspection bureau of Scotland Yard.

Nethercliffe, who was the chief handwriting expert in the days when the witty Lord Brampton was at the bar, had such faith in his methods that finally he came to believe that he could not make a mistake.

In a case in which he was under cross examination by Lord Brampton, then Mr. Hawkins, Nethercliffe had claimed that his system gave infallible results and had further stated that his son, whom he had trained, made use of the same system.

"Then," said the wily advocate, "your son, working on your system, is as good as you are?"

"Yes," replied the father, with some pride in his voice, "he is."

"That is to say, he, too, is infallible?"

"Yes," again replied the witness.

"Well, now, Mr. Nethercliffe, was there ever a case in which you and your son appeared on opposite sides?"

Nethercliffe tried to evade the question, which, he complained, was an unfair one, but on being pressed was forced to admit that on a certain occasion he had given evidence on one side and his son upon the other.

Swift came the unanswerable retort: "How comes it, then, that two infallibles appeared on opposite sides?"

A FAIRLY BIG TREE.

The One McDougall Said Was Blown Down in Venezuela.

Walt McDougall, the caricaturist, was sitting in the Friars' club in New York one night discussing everything in particular when the subject of big trees came up, one of the party claiming that he saw the stump of a red cedar in California so large that 200 couple danced on it at the same time.

"I grant you they have some big trees in California," said McDougall "but listen to this one. My uncle, who owns a very large ranch in Venezuela, went out one morning after a heavy windstorm and found that a huge cot

Be Fair. Buy a sack or barrel before judging PURITY FLOUR

SOME people have attempted to judge PURITY FLOUR before knowing the facts about it—before using it. So we ask you to be fair and to buy a sack or barrel of PURITY FLOUR and give it a thorough try-out before attempting to arrive at a judgment.

Look at the beauty and loftiness of the golden-crusted, snowy-crumbed loaves, fit for a king. Count them and see how many more of them PURITY yields to the barrel than ordinary flour does.

in California," said McDougall "but listen to this one. My uncle, who owns a very large ranch in Venezuela, went out one morning after a heavy windstorm and found that a huge cottonwood on the bank of the river had blown down, the branches of which were resting on the other side. He also discovered that 3,000 of his cattle were missing and on searching found the missing stock on the other side of the river. An investigation quickly followed, when they found to their surprise that the tree was hollow, which afforded a bridge across the river, through which the cattle strayed. After the men had succeeded in driving the stock back through the trunk of the tree it was found that thirty-six of the steers were missing. Another vigorous search was made, and where do you suppose we found them?" asked Walt.

"Heaven knows," said the red cedar man. "Where?"

"They had strolled off in the hollow branches of the tree," said McDougall. —New York Telegraph.

The Swiss Congress.

The regular sessions of the Swiss congress begins in June and December and last only about a month. Extra sessions are very rare. As one member remarked, the idea is to have as much real legislation done among the people as possible, while the duty of the legislative bodies is officially to record public sentiment as expeditiously as possible. The proceedings of the Swiss legislature are extremely interesting to an American. Discussions take place either in French, German or Italian, according to the inclination of the legislator addressing the house, and a colloquy may embody all three languages. Formal readings are in French, but discussions are usually in German. —National Magazine.

The Call to Individuality.

No man thinks his own thought; no man uses his own eyes; no man stands upon his own feet; no man walks alone. We go in flocks; we lean on others; we follow the multitudes blindly; we bend our necks to the yoke of public opinion; we have no self reliance. The only virtue we have is conformity. The demand of the age is for men and women of character who are self poised, self reliant, independent and self assertive. Society follows customs and routine. The redemption of the race is in the originality of individuals. —Jacob Gould Schurman.

Friends.

Put your heart into the search for a friend, freely offer assistance to any of the crowd who needs it, and, sooner or later, you will find a hand outstretched toward yours, and your soul will meet its likeness. Do not imitate those who, shut up in their individuality as in a citadel, indifferent to all passers by, yet send forth on the four winds of heaven the melancholy cry, "There are no friends!" They do exist, be sure of it, but only for those who seek, for those deeply interested in the search and for those who do not remain content to spin out the thread of life in a corner like a spider's web, intended to catch happiness.

Halleck and Drake.

Fitz Greene Halleck, the poet and author of "Marco Bozzaris," who died in 1867, is buried in the Halleck family plot in the Alderbrook cemetery at Winsted, Conn. The body of his friend, Joseph Rodman Drake, the author of "The American Flag," rests in the old Hunt burying ground in Bronx borough, New York city, now known as Drake's park.

A CLASSIC ON CONSUMPTION

Words of a Prominent Canadian Citizen
as He Has Viewed the War Against Consumption

"Men, women, and children are all being mowed down every day by this fell disease—consumption—and it is a mistake."

These words of Mr. Edward Gurney, spoken at a gathering in Muskoka a year ago, may be fittingly termed a classic on consumption.

The records of the Muskoka Sanatorium, as do those of other institutions of a like kind, on this continent and in Europe, show very clearly that this much dreaded disease can be, and is being conquered by the treatment followed in any well-managed sanatorium. In our own Province, within the time that the hospitals in Muskoka have been in existence, the death-rate from consumption has been reduced twenty-five per cent.

The life-saving possibilities of the sanatorium in Canada are limited only by the means required to carry on and extend the work. For this reason we very cheerfully ask our readers to help in the great and growing work that is being done at Muskoka.

It is a fine statement for the trustees of the Muskoka Free Hospital for Consumptives to be able to make, that from the month of April, 1902, when this institution was first opened, up to the present day, not a single patient has ever been refused admission to this hospital because unable to pay.

Mr. W. J. Gage, Chairman of the Executive Committee, 84 Spadina Ave., or the Sec.-Treas., 347 King W., Toronto, will gladly receive and acknowledge contributions.

DOCTORS HAD GIVEN UP ALL HOPE

"Fruit-a-tives" saved my Life

Rev. R. A. PIERRE, Q., May 9, 1910.

"I took upon my recovery as nothing short of a miracle. I was for eleven years, constantly suffering from Chronic Dyspepsia and Indigestion.

I was treated by several doctors and they simply did me no good. During the latter part of my illness, I was so thin that I weighed only 90 pounds, and I vomited everything I ate.

The doctors gave me up to die as the stomach trouble produced heart weakness and I was frequently unconscious. I received the Last Rites of The Church.

At this time, a lady strongly urged me to try 'Fruit-a-tives'. When I had taken one box, I was much better and after three boxes, I was practically well again, and had gained 20 pounds. I have taken 13 boxes in all and now weigh 150 pounds and am well."

Deafness Cannot be Cured.

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflammation of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

THEY ATE LEATHER.

The Way Morgan's Pirates Prepared Their Tough Food.

The infamous Captain Morgan and his piratical crew were sometimes in tight places at Panama and on one occasion were reduced to eating their leather bags.

"Some persons," says one of the company (Exquemelin, whose narrative is reproduced in "The Buccaneers in the West Indies"), "who never were out of their mothers' kitchens may ask how these pirates could eat, swallow and digest these pieces of leather, so hard and dry, unto whom I only answer that could they once experience what hunger—or, rather, famine—is they would certainly find the manner by their own necessity, as the pirates did."

"For these first took the leather and sliced it in pieces. Then they beat it between two stones and rubbed it, often dipping it in the water of the river to render it by these means supple and tender. Lastly they scraped off the hair and roasted or broiled it upon the fire. And, being thus cooked, they cut it into small morsels and ate it, helping it down with frequent gulps of water, which by good fortune they had right at hand."

Mr. Downing, on Roblin bridge, read and on motion was adopted.
Minutes of to-day were read, and on motion, were confirmed.

Children Cry FOR FLETCHER'S CASTORIA

ENLIVENED THE SCENE.

But Hero's Improvisation Did Not Help Leander Much.

Innumerable are the tales of actors in difficulties. Here is one related of Christian Brandes, the dramatist, who in his youth belonged to a strolling company which played pieces of an extremely primitive kind.

On one occasion the play was entitled "Hery and Leander," the dialogue being left pretty much to the discretion of the players. It had been agreed, however, that Hero was to be coy and not confess her love for Leander till he had again and again expressed his readiness to be hanged, burned and drowned in her behalf. But the lady was soft hearted, besides being exceedingly fond of Brandes, nor could she listen unmoved to the first passionate pleadings of the youth, who explained that he had sworn across the Hellespont to see her. "My dear Leander," she exclaimed, "I cannot resist you. Accept my hand and my heart!"

Leander knew not what to say. All his prepared phrases were useless. The manager came to his aid with a loud whisper addressed to Hero, "In the fiend's name, improvise a few words and retire!"

The poor girl, turning to the audience, repeated her lesson. "In the fiend's name, I improvise a few words and retire," and then tripped off the stage, greatly relieved.

The Jenny Lind Rock.

The Ohio river claims among its treasures the Jenny Lind rock. The singer was a passenger on a steamer which struck on a sand bar near the rock, and while waiting for the boat to be floated Miss Lind had boatmen row her out to the rock, where she stood alone and sang a song.

Of Courses.

In the bankruptcy court I once heard a witness asked the amount of his gross income. "Me gross income, is it? Sure an' I'd have ye know that I have no gross income. I'm a fisherman, an' me income is all net." was the astonishing reply.—Green Bag.

A Queer Customer.

"Mandy," said the village tailor to his wife. "I'm going to give Sam Billings a suit of clothes for a pig."

"My goodness, papa!" exclaimed his little daughter. "What does a pig want with a suit of clothes?"—New York Times.

ARE YOU AS WELL AS A YEAR AGO?

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills Point the Way to Health and Strength.

Ask yourself the important question whether you are as strong as you were a year ago, as bodily fit as you should be. Many a reader has to confess "No." Some weakening ailment has during the past year laid hold of the system, unfitting you for the duties of life and seriously clouding the outlook of the coming days. It may be rheumatism with its sharp twinges of pain, indigestion, headache, nervous debility, depression and lack of energy, or the pains and ailments which only common folk know. It is well to know that all these weakening disorders arise from an impoverished condition of the blood. Renew and enrich your blood and all your troubles will cease. This is a strong statement, but it is made on the testimony of thousands who once suffered, but who have gained health and strength by the aid of the new, rich blood supplied by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. We can quote thousands of cases similar to the following: Mr. Jos. Grandmaison is a young man well known in the town of St. Jerome, Que. He says: "For a couple of years I began to find my strength failing, but did not dream that the trouble was serious. As I grew weaker I began to doctor, but it did not help me. The least exertion made my heart palpitate violently, my stomach seemed out of order and my whole system became so run down that I was finally forced to quit work. I had now been doctoring for almost six months and was very naturally growing discouraged. At this juncture I read of a case similar to mine, cured through the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and decided to try them. I took the Pills faithfully for about two months, gradually growing stronger and at the end of that time I was as well as any man could be. I shall always praise the medicine that raised me from despair to the blessing of good health."

A KING'S BROTHER-IN-LAW.

CLOSE QUARTERS;

OR, THE HOUSE IN THE RUE BARBETTE

At last Hussein found his tongue. "I have never met you before, Mr. Brett," he said, "but you will understand that it is quite impossible for me even to attempt to discuss the very interesting facts you have brought to my notice without some inquiry on my part, and on yours some proof that the events concerning which you have informed me have really happened. You see, one cannot trust newspapers. They get such garbled accounts of occurrences, particularly of State affairs; they are misleading."

"Excuse me. I am sure you will admit that although I dispensed with details in my brief statement, the facts were undeniable. I can tell you exactly how and why Mehemet Ali and his two secretaries, together with Hussein, his confidential servant, were murdered. I can tell you how the diamonds were obtained from the Albert Gate mansion, and how they were conveyed to Paris. I have told you exactly the object of my visit, and I still await an answer."

Hussein-ul-Mulk laughed a trifle uneasily.

"I can see no harm in telling you that I am not aware of any diamonds in which I am personally interested having arrived in Paris."

"Indeed!" said Brett, leaning forward in his chair, and instantly dropping the listless air which had hitherto characterized his utterances. "That is a very curious thing, because the diamonds have been in Paris at least two days, and if they are withheld from the possession of those who employed certain agents to secure them, there must be a powerful reason to account for the delay. Speaking quite disinterestedly, monsieur, I would advise you to inquire into the matter at once."

His words evidently perturbed the Turk.

"Will you object," he said, "if I leave you alone a few minutes? I wish to consult with a friend of mine who happens to be staying here."

"Assuredly," said Brett, "but let me beg you to leave your cigarettes behind. They are exquisite."

Hussein-ul-Mulk had never before encountered such a personality as Reginald Brett. His eyebrows became perfectly oval with surprise and admiration for the man who could thus juggle with a dangerous situation.

"Here is my case," he said, "and when we have concluded this most interesting conversation I hope you will leave me your address, so that I may have the extreme pleasure of sending you a few hundreds."

Then he quitted the room. He was absent fully five minutes.

On his return he said—

"In the opinion of my friend, Mr. Brett, it is impossible for us to do anything at the present moment. We must inquire; we must verify; we must consult others. You will see that the negotiations you have undertaken require on our part some display of the extreme delimatter," said the early gleefully.

"Yes," replied the barrister. "I have been revolving in my mind the possibilities of to-morrow morning, and you must play an important part in what, by chance, may turn out to be a melodrama. Now, listen to me carefully. In the neighborhood of the Porté St. Martin there is a street known as the Rue Barbette. At eleven o'clock to-morrow I go to the house No. 11 in that street, and you will accompany me as far as the door. It will be your duty to stand outside and take note of all persons who enter or leave the house once I have disappeared from view in the interior. You will maintain watch until 11.30. If at that hour I have not rejoined you, make your way to the nearest policeman, and tell him that you have good reason to believe that a friend of yours has either been murdered or suffered serious personal injury in a room on the second story of the house in question. You will then, in company with the policeman, come rapidly to the apartment I have indicated and demand an immediate entrance—if necessary bursting the door open."

"And what then?" gasped the amazed earl.

"I really don't know," said Brett imperturbably. "It is possible you may find my gory corpse in one of the inner rooms. The best I can hope for is that I shall be simply a prisoner, but I fully expect to be seriously injured at the very least."

"But look here, Brett; are you doing the right thing in this matter? Why on earth should you run such an awful risk, and take it alone, too? Isn't it possible to obtain some trustworthy detective to keep watch in the street, and let me go into the place with you? Don't you see, old chap, that two of us might make a reasonable show if violence is attempted? One man hasn't much chance."

The barrister cut short his friend's protestations.

"I sent for you, Lord Fairholme," he said, "because I felt that I could trust you to obey my instructions implicitly. If my visit fails, there will certainly be some shooting or stabbing, or perhaps an attempt may be made to keep me a prisoner. This latter eventuality renders the presence of the police essential. No matter what has happened to me they will, with your assistance, be able to take up the inquiry exactly where I leave off. In this notebook here, which I am placing in a locked drawer"—and he suited his action to the words—"you will find details of all that I have done up to the present moment, together with the lines along which future inquiries should proceed. In particular, you will find an elaboration of the theory which I expect to-morrow's visit to confirm. You fully understand me? All this anticipates that after 11.30 to-morrow I shall be personally able to conduct the investigation further."

"Well, Mr.—Mr."—Hussein-ul-Mulk consulted a visiting card—"Mr. Reginald Brett, I think is your name? It would be idle on my part to compliment you on your bravery, but it would be still more futile to attempt to conceal from you the danger of the position in which you now stand."

"Sit," corrected Brett, still smiling.

"Well," said the Turk, "we will not quibble about words. The fact remains, Mr. Brett, that you have needlessly thrust yourself into an enterprise of such a desperate character that all interlopers can be dealt with only in one way."

"You kill them," said Brett airily.

"Yes," said the Turk, "I deeply regret to inform you that you have guessed the object of my remarks with the singular skill you have already betrayed in reaching the existing position. I can only add that I am surprised that the same skill did not influence you to avoid forcing upon us the only alternative left."

"Am I to be killed at once?" said Brett, speaking with a slight affectation of boredom.

WORLD'S LONGEST CHIMNEY.

Wales Has One Two Miles High, and a Brook Through It.

Wales has probably the longest chimney in the world. It is two miles high, and has a brook running through it. The chimney is connected with the copper works at Cwmavon, near Aberavon. This is how it came to be built. About 60 years ago the copper smoke from these works was the plague of the neighboring countryside. It settled upon and destroyed the grass for 20 miles round, while the sulphur and arsenic in the fumes affected the hoofs of cattle, causing gangrene. The company tried all sorts of devices to remedy the trouble, but in vain.

Finally, Mr. Robert Brenton, who was later engineer of the Sind Railway in India, solved the problem. The copper works are at the foot of a high, steep mountain. Mr. Brenton constructed a flue or chimney running continuously from the base to about 100 above the summit, following the natural slope of the ground. The brick which lined it, and of which it was largely constructed, was burned close by. A small spring, rushing out near the mountain top, was turned into the chimney, and allowed to flow through almost its entire length to condense the smoke. Once a year it is swept out, and about a ton of precipitated copper obtained. Its top can be seen for between 40 and 50 miles.

A KING'S BROTHER-IN-LAW.

The Duke of Fife's Sway Is Still Feudal.

Of all the great Highland Chieftain there is none more patriotic than the Duke of Fife, brother-in-law of the King, says the London Daily Sketch. The Duke has his own band of pipers, and it is to their shrill music he rises each morning when he resides at Mar Lodge. Like the Campbells in Argyll, his sway is still feudal, he being more king than landlord to his tenants and retainers.

He likes to recall one unique distinction, that of having entertained his prospective mother-in-law, the then Princess of Wales, to a magnificent ball at his house in Portman Square. Never before or since has a bachelor played host to a princess of Wales or a Queen consort. One of the possessions he values most is a beautiful miniature depicting his bride-elect, which was presented to him by Queen Alexandra on the morning of her daughter's wedding, bearing a card inscribed: "From your mother-in-law." The Duke and Duchess of Fife are often to be seen in the neighborhood of Portman Square, walking arm-in-arm, making pilgrimages to some of the numerous art shops in the neighborhood, for they are both great lovers of curios.

Brett, it is impossible for us to do anything at the present moment. We must inquire; we must verify; we must consult others. You will see that the negotiations you have undertaken require on our part some display of the extreme delicacy and tact in which you have given us so admirable a lesson. Suppose, now, we agree to meet here again to-morrow at the same hour. Am I to understand that what has transpired this morning remains, we will not say a secret, but a myth, a mere idle phantasy as between you and me?"

"That is precisely my idea," said Brett. "One hates to mention such a brutal word as 'police' in an affair demanding finesse. Personally I hate the blunderers. They rob life of its charm. They have absolutely no conception of art. Romance with them can end only in penal servitude or in the gallows. Believe me, Hussein, I am very discreet."

In another minute he was standing in the street, and inhaling generous draughts of the keen air of Paris.

"I wonder how much my life was worth during the first five minutes?" said he to himself; and then he made his way to the telegraph office, when he despatched the following message—

"To the Earl of Fairholme, Stanhope Gate, London."

"Have received definite intelligence which confirms my views. Expect our friend will be discovered within forty-eight hours. If possible, join me at Grand Hotel, Paris, to-night, eleven o'clock."

"BRETT."

CHAPTER VIII.

Pending Fairholme's arrival, Brett was not idle. He visited a prominent jeweller in the Rue de la Paix, and, after making some trivial purchases, led the conversation to the question of diamonds.

Brett had no special object in seeking this information. When engaged in elucidating any mystery he made it an invariable rule to post himself as accurately as possible concerning all minor details which might, by any straining of circumstances, become useful.

He retired to his hotel and jotted down some notes of this conversation. Whilst engaged in the task a telegram arrived from the Earl of Fairholme announcing that nobleman's departure from London by the afternoon train service via Boulogne.

Punctually at the time appointed the party reached the hotel. He was all eagerness to learn what had happened since they parted in London, and why Brett had so suddenly summoned him to Paris.

"I really have not much definite information," said the barrister. "Thus far I am building chiefly on surmise, but I have undoubtedly come into contact with the persons who organized and planned, if they did not actually carry out the raid on the Albert Gate mansion."

"Then you have news of Jack?" broke in Fairholme excitedly.

"Not exactly. All I can do at present is to assure you that the scent is hot, and we may run our quarry to earth some few minutes after eleven o'clock to-morrow morning."

"I am jolly glad that there is a chance of my being useful in this particular, you will find an elaboration of the theory which I expect to-morrow's visit to confirm. You fully understand me? All this anticipates that after 11.30 to-morrow I shall be personally able to conduct the investigation further."

"But can't you explain matters a little more clearly? Is it necessary that I should be kept in the dark as to the circumstances which have led up to this critical movement to-morrow?"

"Not in the least. It is, indeed, very important that you should comprehend all that has gone before; I only started at the end, so to speak, so as to fix accurately in your mind your part of the business, which now stands separate and distinctly outlined in your memory. What I am going to tell you simply leads up to the expected denouement."

He then recited to the wondering ear the whole of the curious events which had happened during the preceding twenty-four hours.

It was late when they got to bed, but they rested well, and, after the manner of their race, fortified themselves with a good breakfast against the trials of the day, whatever these might prove to be. A few minutes before the appointed hour they quitted a facade in the vicinity of the Rue Barbette, and at eleven o'clock Brett passed the concierge, whilst Fairholme took up his stand outside.

The barrister was received with smiling complacency by Hussein-ul-Mulk. On this occasion he was conducted to another room of the flat, and he promptly noted that the windows looked out to the rear of the building, whereas his previous visit he could survey the street.

"This promises badly," said Brett to himself, but he betrayed not the slightest unwillingness to fall in with the arrangements made for his reception, and lounged back in a comfortable chair so easily that not even the quick-witted Turk suspected that the barrister's hip pocket contained a very serviceable revolver.

Hussein-ul-Mulk commenced the conversation. "I have," he said, "a couple of friends here who are interested in the matter you were good enough to mention to me yesterday. With your permission I will introduce them," and he threw open another door with a single Turkish word which Brett imagined was an invitation to enter.

Two men came from an adjoining room. They were Turks—swarthy, evil-looking customers, but well dressed, and evidently persons of consequence in their own country. The new-comers eyed the barrister curiously, and with no very friendly intent.

A brief conversation in Turkish resulted in Hussein-ul-Mulk addressing Brett.

"I must apologize for the fact that my friends here only speak their own native tongue. Before we proceed to business I wish to ask you a few questions."

"Certainly," said Brett; "go ahead."

"You mentioned to me yesterday that you had no desire to involve the aid of the police in prosecuting the inquiry which interests you."

"Quite right," said Brett.

"May I ask if you have adhered to that intention?"

"Absolutely."

trouble which produced a breaking out on my face. The doctors gave it a long Latin name, but their medicines failed to cure it. Along with this I had frequent headaches, nervousness and usually pain in my stomach after meals.

"I got disgusted with the drugs, stopped them and coffee off short, and quit eating everything but fruit and Grape-Nuts, with Postum for my table beverage."

"The headaches, stomach trouble and nervous weakness disappeared almost like magic, which showed that when the cause was removed and good food and drink used nature was ready to help."

"My blood was purified and my complexion became like a young girl's, while my weight was increased from 90 to 120 pounds in a few months—good, solid, firm flesh, where it used to be soft and flabby."

"I recommended Grape-Nuts and Postum to one of my friends, who was afflicted as I had been. She followed my advice, and in a short time was restored to complete health, and in about 8 months her weight increased from 100 to 148 pounds."

"Our doctor, observing the effect of Grape-Nuts and Postum in our cases, declared, the other day, that he would hereafter prescribe these food products for gastritis." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

Black velvet ribbons are much used for trimming.

Many large velvet hats with turned up brims are seen.

Many jackets of serge, cheviot and corduroy show the belted effect.

Machine stitching is popular on skirts and coat suits of cheviot and English suitings.

RELIEF IS QUICK; BUT CURE IS SURE

NAPOLEON VAILLANCOURT SPEAKS OF DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS.

They soon cured his Kidney troubles, and in six months there is no sign of their coming back.

St. Anne des Monts, Gaspé Co., Que., Nov. 6 (Special).—"It is six months since I was cured, and I have had no return of my trouble," in these words, Napoleon Vaillancourt, a well known resident of this place, gives evidence that Dodd's Kidney Pills not only give quick relief to sufferers from Kidney Disease, but clean that disease out, root and branch, and cure it permanently.

That Mr. Vaillancourt had Kidney Disease everyone here knows. That he is cured is also established beyond a doubt. Dodd's Kidney Pills did it.

"My back bothered me, also my heart and my kidneys, and my limbs would cramp," Mr. Vaillancourt states in giving his experience. Now all that is gone and he is a sound, healthy man. Do you wonder that he recommends Dodd's Kidney Pills?

Dodd's Kidney Pills cure quickly and permanently because they go right to the root of the trouble. They act directly on the Kidneys. They never fail to cure.

RIVERS RUN IN STRIPES.

Visible Line of Demarcation Up to the Very Edge.

One of the phenomena of this land of waters (South America) is the retention by each of its own color without diffusion to the very point of actual contact, even where the rivers differ vastly in volume, Black waters flow into white ones, and white ones empty into black ones, retaining their individuality up to the very edge, a visible line of demarcation, on one side white on the other side black, unmingled and unexplained, says Harper's Magazine.

Thus the puny black Atabapo joins the surging white Orinoco to no loss of integrity; the black Negro receives almost at right angles the odious white Casiquiare without contamination and itself empties into the Amazon, so much as tingeing the mud colored waters of that mighty river. Humboldt reports on the lower Casiquiare, which I did not visit, a black and a white stream, both coming from the east, while of the rivers flowing in from the west some are of white and some of black water.

Of the number of small streams coming into the upper Casiquiare from the east those I noted were olive. These colors, which among white waters range from the really white Branco through many yellowish mud shades and of black waters from the greenish and bluish and deep brownish to the really deep almost black of the Negro are explained, the scientists maintain, by the character of the soil whence they take their source and through which they flow.

A MOTHER'S PRAISE OF BABY'S OWN TABLETS

Mrs. B. S. Baker, East Margareville, N. S., writes: "No mother would recommend for her baby any medicine of which she was not absolutely sure. A baby's life is too precious. A mother is always pleased to recommend to other mothers something that has been valuable in restoring the health of her own child. That is why I can highly recommend Baby's Own Tablets. They cured my baby who was suffering from constipation and I feel that I cannot praise them enough. I would advise all mothers with sickly babies to give them a trial, well knowing what the result will be." The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

A Pill That is Prized.—There have been many pills put upon the market and pressed upon public attention, but none has endured so long or met with so much favor as Parmelee's Vegetable Pills. Widespread use of them has attested their great value, and they need no further advertisement than this. Having firmly established themselves in public esteem, they now rank without a peer in the list of standard vegetable preparations.

No stranger who has never visited England can form a conception of the vast amount of human wreckage that drifts through the London streets and eddies through the London parks, or off the bold, firm fashion in which, at certain hours the disreputable elements of the metropolitan population assert themselves in public places. Vagrancy, mendicancy and solicitation run rampant; the best neighborhoods and finest vistas of the world's capital are spoiled by the loafer, the beggar and the fallen woman. A realization of the desirability of municipal decorum has finally dawned upon the authorities. London has inaugurated a movement to clean itself up. This movement is supported by the local government board, the commissioner of the metropolitan police board, the trade union commission, the London Mendicity Society, the Social Welfare Association and scores of similar agencies.

Fortunately, the philanthropic side of the endeavor is prominent. Though the public is urgently asked under no circumstances to give alms, yet all helpable persons without shelter will be helped, lazy persons will be compelled to work, and suitable employment will be supplied for those needing it. All those unable to work will be provided for at the various institutions under control of the united societies. The problem is vast and complicated—it comes at the end of many generations of social injustice. But the present movement is described as the most powerful ever organized for the purpose, and the growing democratization of the country may result in improving not only the aspect of things but also their essential nature.

Moral support will be created for the Chinese revolutionists in civilized nations by the reports of the frightful massacre of noncombatants—helpless men, women and children—at Nanking by the imperial army. The world does not countenance butchery even of soldiers when they are without arms; it feels horror and detestation when babes are slaughtered. The danger is that savagery on the part of the Manchu troops may cause retaliatory savagery; the most moderate of the revolutionists must feel the spirit of revenge burning fiercely within him after such an occurrence as that at Nanking.

The revolutionists naturally wish to use Nanking as an argument for recognition by the powers of themselves as belligerents, but the revolutionists have not yet established themselves firmly as a cohesive

BUGS WORSE THAN FIRE.

There are insects whose methods of attack are so obscure and covert that they are not usually discovered till all by the ordinary farmer, who simply knows at the end of the year that his crops have not done well and the year has been an unprofitable one for him, writes F. M. Webster.

Perhaps some of the wheat straw worms have attacked his wheat and the result has only shown in the shriveled condition and light weight of the kernels, with no apparent connection between the two.

His corn has not grown well, the ears are short and not well filled out at the tips, precisely as if his land was lacking in fertility or a drouth had prevailed, and he may say the loss to either the weather or his land, whereas it was the corn root worm that ruined his crop, a pest that he might easily have avoided.

His timothy meadow has died out, and he does not know why it should have done so, when had he looked carefully about the roots he would have found the short winged form of the chinch bug present there in myriads.

Such losses as these are not considered at all and do not enter into consideration, either by the farmer or statistician, unless they are of such magnitude as to devastate large areas of country.

Here we have a financial loss, falling upon a single industry nearly three times as great as that caused by fire, and to ask if such a factor should be reckoned upon and carefully considered by those engaged in that industry appears almost ridiculous.

It would seem to go without saying that such elements should not only receive most careful consideration, but every effort should be made by farmers to familiarize themselves with the minutest details in order by every possible means to protect themselves against loss.

HORSES AND COLTS.

Every colt should be taught a fast walking gait. This can be done by gently pushing him while walking, but he should never be urged too long at a time before changing his gait.

If the colts are to come out sound, lively and ready for work on market next spring they must have good feed, plenty of exercise in open air every fine day and warm quarters at night all winter.

The first test to be given a new workman on the farm is to send him out with a team. If he handles them kindly and skillfully he is pretty sure to be a good all-round man.

If you find a workman kicking or beating a horse back him up into a corner and give him a sound lecture. Then watch him carefully and if he repeats the act send him adrift.

Never buy a horse for family use where the women folk are to drive him without at least one week's trial. If he is put through all his paces and sent up against steam engines and other scary things he will develop his good or bad faith in that time.

INTERNATIONAL LESSON, DECEMBER 3.

Lesson X.—Nehemiah rebuilds the wall of Jerusalem, Neh. 4: Golden Text, I. Cor. 16. 13.

Verse 1, Sanballat—He is the first mentioned of the malignant enemies whom Nehemiah encountered (compare Neh. 2. 10). It was not so long since all the Syrian colonists in Palestine had joined hands to obtain from Artaxerxes an order for the stoppage of the work of restoration in Jerusalem. There was great jealousy of Jerusalem throughout Samaria, and the heathen in general were angry at Ezra's severe strictures on intermarriage. But now that Nehemiah had come with royal authority, hostility had to take a new form, that of cunningly devised intrigue. The leader of all this renewed opposition was Sanballat, called "the people. The work proceeded at a rapid pace because of the eagerness of the workers. The governor, with characteristic generosity, disclaims any credit which may be due him. At this point, all the wall had been completed, without gaps anywhere, to half its height. The ancient wall reached a height of two hundred feet.

7. The Arabians—These are the third class of foes mentioned in chapter 2. To those already cited there are now added the Ashdodites, who were dwellers in a strong city near the sea. When these heard of the repairing of the walls (the figure being that of the healing up of a wound, as seen in the closing up of the breaches), they were more worth than at first.

8. They conspired—They quit their ineffective taunts, and got down to active business. Their plan was, first, to carry on an actual fighting campaign. Besides this, they hoped to cause confusion in the city, by winning over those disaffected therein, and by drawing the builders away from their work.

9. We made our prayer—Nehemiah sets at the forefront of his defensive measures the force of prayer. Up to this time we have

RUSSIA DURING THE TERROR

TRIALS AND TRIUMPHS OF A NEWSPAPER MAN.

Famous Correspondent Gives Graphic Account of Times in Warsaw.

It was my duty to go to Warsaw when the whole of the Russian Empire was in the throes of revolution, writes Mr. John Foster Fraser in London answers. Not only was there an upheaval against the Government, but there was a national movement on the part of the Poles to throw off the shackles of Russia. Also, there was an active Anarchist propaganda against society in general. Law had broken down, and all the blackguards of Warsaw were having a prosperous time under the guise of being revolutionaries.

They were killing gendarmes in the streets of Warsaw at the rate of twenty-five a day. Tragic though it was, there was a certain amusement to be obtained in seeing that all policemen in the main streets of Warsaw had to be protected by three soldiers, one walking on either side and one walking behind.

A RANGER SPOT.

On the very day I arrived a bomb was thrown at the Governor, and he and those with him were smashed to pulp. There was a grand official funeral. Orders were given that all civilians must keep indoors, all doors had to be closed, and all blinds drawn.

From my hotel window I did take a look, and there, instead of the soldiers facing toward the street to do honor to the dead, they were all turned towards the houses, with carbines ready to shoot anybody who dared make an appearance at window or door.

Warsaw was in a state of siege. Troops were everywhere. It was necessary when in the streets to walk with hands away from one's pockets, for a movement to get a handkerchief or a cigar was often interpreted as a movement to draw a revolver, and a violent arrest was usually the consequence.

Shootings were frequent. I remember one night being in the Jewish quarter. I heard the ring of a revolver. I ran forward to see, and there I found an old man lying on the pavement outside his shop-door, with the blood streaming from his forehead.

NOBODY'S BUSINESS.

What had happened was that a thief had entered the shop, and, under threat of murder, pilfered the till.

Just as he was escaping, however, the old man followed to raise an alarm, and then the thief swung round, shot him dead, and escaped—as everybody did escape in Warsaw during those terrible days. Nobody tried to stop the murderer; nobody ran to the old man's assistance. It was nobody's affair, and if anyone had shown concern they ran very grave risks of being arrested under suspicion.

One night I was in a cafe. Suddenly, at the further end, a small bomb came through the plate-glass window and there was an explosion. Instantly everybody hast-to use ranking as an argument for recognition by the powers of themselves as belligerents, but the revolutionists have not yet established themselves firmly as a cohesive body that can rule and reform China. The lives of foreigners have so far not been endangered by either imperialists or revolutionists; still the latest reports are not highly promising for the permanent success of the revolutionists. There is too much anarchy. There is too much confusion. China needs reform, but a few leaders of progressive ideas and ability cannot give it to her except through long and patient effort. Reform may yet come through better advisers of the existing throne.

GREATLY MISSED.

II. Cor. 2: 12.

When faithful Paul to Troas came,
Commissioned in the Saviour's name

The Gospel to declare,
No conscious freedom there he had;
His tender heart was grieved and sad;

For Titus was not there.

And Titus he had longed to see;
Because he felt that surely he
Would in this service share;
But fruitless was his earnest quest.
His weary spirit found no rest;
For Titus was not there.

If only Titus had appeared,
He would have been, while others
feared,
Prepared to do and dare;
But nothing gave him hope and heart;
He had from Troas to depart;
For Titus was not there.

And many faithful men of God
Who tread where Paul so bravely
trod,
The word of life to bear;
Seem all in vain their strength to spend
Because the tried and true friend
So often is not there.

As Moses needed those of old
Who could his drooping hands uphold
With strong and steadfast care,
So every faithful pastor needs
The ones who help him while he pleads
And who are always there.

A MODEL SCHOOL HOUSE.

A school building in which every room has a direct connection with the ground, without first entering the main hall has just been built just beside the site of the famous Collingwood, Ohio, school in which 175 children perished by fire in 1908. It represents many unique features of construction and is said to be as fireproof and panic-proof as it is fireproof for a school building to be.

It takes a wise woman to transform a "good fellow" into a model husband.

had come with royal authority, hostility had to take a new form, that of cunningly devised intrigue. The leader of all this renewed opposition was Sanballat, called "the Horonite" from his dwelling in Bethhoron, a town on the borders of Ephraim. He was a moving spirit in the city of Samaria, possibly governor.

Mocked—At first, we are told, Sanballat and his fellows were deeply grieved over the coming of Nehemiah (Neh. 2: 10). But this soon gave way to wrath and indignation when they saw that the people actually responded to the young governor's appeal to rise and build the wall. In their rage they resorted to the weak weapon of railery.

2. Will they sacrifice?—This taunt amounts to a question as to whether these Jews expect simply to propitiate their God with burnt offerings and their work will be accomplished. Surely they cannot think to make both a beginning and an end in the short space of one day? For one thing the stones were burned and they could not revive them. And think of the heaps of rubbish! Almost a century and a half had passed since the walls had been razed. Huge building stones were strewn in every direction, while dust and refuse buried the ancient foundations many feet deep—explorers have stated that in some places the accumulated rubbish now reaches the great depth of 125 feet.

3. Tobiah the Ammonite—He was chief of a small tribe on the other side of the Jordan, a people who had gotten into Samaria after the Babylonian invasion. He is mentioned as the second of Nehemiah's enemies, and is called a servant, perhaps because he had held some position under the Persian governor (Neh. 2: 10). All these neighboring communities were now combined in order to prevent the reinstatement of Jerusalem as the dominant power of Palestine.

If a fox go up—It is possible there was some truth in the inference that even the soft tread of a light animal would be sufficient to bring the wall down. So hastily had it been put together that strength was wanting.

4. Hear, O our God—It was characteristic of Nehemiah, that, in face of grave danger, he turned to heaven for help. Similar parenthetical prayers are found in other parts of Nehemiah (5: 19; 6: 9; 13: 14, 22). It may seem to us that he was inexcusably vindictive. Such maledictions, as elsewhere in the Old Testament, display a spirit that comes short of the Christian ideal. Prayers that our enemies may not be forgiven their iniquity (5), and that their sin may remain as a permanent record in the divine book of remembrance, are not in harmony with the injunctions of him who said: "Love your enemies." But we have to make allowances. Nehemiah certainly felt himself justified. To him the reproach was not merely his, nor his people's. It was one God shared with them—we are despised. It was so clearly God's work he was doing that Nehemiah represents Sanballat and Tobiah as provoking God to anger publicly when they sought to withdraw the builders by mockery.

6. So we built the wall—Nehemiah had succeeded because he had gotten the co-operation of all the builders away from their work.

9. We made our prayer—Nehemiah sets at the forefront of his defensive measures the force of prayer. Up to this time we have mention only of his own private prayers. But now the infection of his habit seems to have spread. United prayer is a mighty engine in the work of the kingdom. But it is necessary for the workers to keep their eyes ceaselessly on the watch against the intrigues of the enemy. Prayer is meant to inspire duty, not to replace it. Nehemiah's posting of sentinels in the surrounding country was prayer in action. Ten plots of the enemy were reported to him, and every one was foiled.

10. Judah said—Here was another kind of difficulty. The Jewish community complained of exhaustion. The work of clearing away the rubbish was such a burden that no strength was left to build the wall.

11. Our adversaries said—From spies, no doubt, Nehemiah learned that a surprise attack was being planned.

12. Ye must return—The apparent meaning is, that the Jews who lived by them (that is, the Samaritan and other enemies) began to be fearful for their own homes; accordingly, they insisted again and again that their fellow townsmen from all those places from which they had gone up for the rebuilding of the wall, should come back and protect their homes from the perils of attack.

13. The lowest parts of the space—This was a general defensive precaution, intended to guard against secret attacks. Where the walls were lowest, and the attacks therefore most likely to be made, and where the places were open and free from dwellings, he set his men according to families. This would guarantee co-ordination of movement, because of the intense clan spirit.

14. I . . . said—Nehemiah's brief speech was pointed, and contained three points: (1) Let them not be afraid; because (2) they are to remember the terrible might of their Lord; and (3) they are not to forget that it is for the very existence of their homes and race that they must fight. By such words Nehemiah dispelled the general disheartenment.

15. It was known to us—They plan to make a secret attack.

16. Coats of mail—Probably nothing elaborate, but rather tough, specially prepared leather doublets, which offered protection down to the knees, leaving the arms free.

The rulers were behind—They were the chief magistrates and officials of the city, and in this case were stationed in the rear of the men of Judah who were engaged in building, so that, in case of emergency, they might give immediate orders and so repel any onslaught.

17, 18.—The apparent contradictions here are easily avoided by distinguishing between the classes of workers, those that bare burdens of rubbish or building material, and those who actually laid the blocks of stone, the builders who would require the use of both hands.

23. Went with his weapon to the water—The text here is obscure, and various meanings have been suggested. Perhaps the best is, that for a certain length of time, say a full month, no one laid down his weapon.

arrested under suspicion. One night I was in a cafe. Suddenly, at the further end, a small bomb came through the plate-glass window and there was an explosion. Instantly everybody hastened into the street. The cafe was deserted. In a few minutes up came about fifty soldiers at the double, and making a half-circle round the cafe, proceeded to fire volleys into the place. Of course, the bomb-thrower had escaped long before, and the only use of the volley-firing was to do a considerable amount of damage to property.

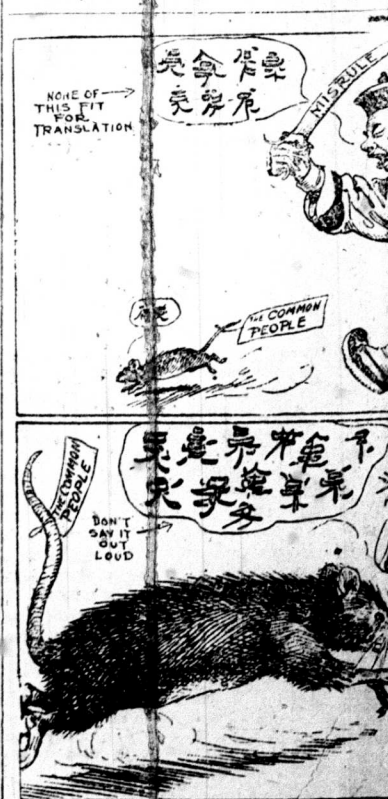

ARRESTS WHOLESALE.

The soldiers were constantly rounding up the populace. Some afternoons a cordon would be formed in a part of the main streets, and everybody who was in it was caught as in a net. Then one by one they had to pass the soldiery and be searched.

If any of them had a revolver or any seditious literature in their possession, or if they were inclined to protest, they were severely handled. I have seen a man's face bashed in with the buttend of a gun. Indeed, one afternoon I, personally, was searched three times. It was this rough treatment of everybody which made thousands of Warsaw citizens, who did not want in any way to be mixed up with the revolution, hate the Russians, and be glad when any of the officials were killed.

This explains why the bomb-throwers and shooters invariably got away. But this does not mean no persons were arrested for the crimes. After each such outrage there was always the arrest of a number of young Jews. That the Jews of Warsaw were sympathetic to the revolution, that indeed they were the brains of it, there is not the least doubt.

But that they were actually guilty of the killing I do not believe. They were tried in secret, and con-shot. I remember about a dozen of them outside the citadel and against the wall. A soldiers were marched up to a distance of about 100 paces they proceeded to fire upon those young Jews. They were not skilful with guns, and most of the shots missed.

While some of the Jews were writhing in agony on the ground, the soldiers loaded again and fired once more. At last all the Jews were wounded, some were killed, and then twice did the soldiers load their guns and fire into the mass, until they were all dead.

AN INTERESTING HEADLINE.

I well recall the evening I was leaving Warsaw for Moscow. I was driving with my servant to the railway station, when we ran into one of the round-ups I have mentioned. The brutality of the soldiers was devolting. Of course, they themselves were being badly treated by the Poles—many of their friends had been massacred; they showed a grim satisfaction in their retaliation.

"There was a terrible hubbub, and the street was 'blackened.' I sent my servant to an officer, asking that we be allowed to drive train. The only answer he got was to be violently beaten by soldiers. I ran forward myself, and I am afraid used some vigorous language, in very bad Russian, to the officer in charge.

Then I began to be hustled myself. Things were certainly beginning to look lively, when I whipped out my British passport, and, I fancy, put on airs as a British subject, and threatened that the Majesty of Britain would have something to say about the affair.

The Russian has a great respect and also a great terror for official documents. Instantly the procedure was changed. The officer made a sort of half apology, and told me I ought to have kept out of the way if I did not want to get into trouble. He allowed me to drive through.

The little scene was witnessed by a Polish journalist, who told the story in his paper in a somewhat exaggerated manner; the story travelled to St. Petersburg, then it was telegraphed to London, with the consequence that some of the evening papers came out with a fine alliterative headline, "Foster Fraser Flogged!" I had not thought the incident worth mentioning, but for several days a telegram was chasing me in Russia that I should send home a full account of my experiences.

AN ABSENT MINDED GENIUS.

How M. Poincare, French Scientist, Annexes Stray Property.

Lienri Poincare, the famous French scientist, does not find it profitable to work more than two hours at a time. His custom is to stay at his desk from 10 o'clock to noon and from 5 to 7 o'clock in the afternoon, never working in the evening after dinner. He drinks wine at meals but never smokes. He goes to bed at 10 o'clock and rises at 7, but does not sleep soundly.

He is blond, 5 feet 5 inches in height and weighs 154 pounds. His head is unusually large, especially

WARS THAT WILL SURE COME

PROPHET FORECASTS TROUBLOUS TIMES.

Predicted That Many Countries Will Soon Unsheath the Sword.

The quarrel that so suddenly broke out between Turkey and Italy came as no surprise to anyone who has made a study of the affairs of nations. It was simply a case of long-continued ill-feeling coming to a head. For years past, Italy and Turkey have been steadily rubbing one another the wrong way in Northern Africa, says London Answers.

It was the same between France and Germany recently. Not a diplomat in Europe but knew that those two great countries would sooner or later try to pay off old scores. There is no love lost between France and Germany. France can never forget how, forty years ago, Germany caught her disorganised and unprepared, and compelled her to hand over an indemnity of two hundred millions sterling, besides two of her best provinces. Those provinces, Alsace and Lorraine, have been a thorn in the side of Germany ever since.

Nations have their feelings just like individuals. The Kaiser would get no welcome if he were imprudent enough to visit Paris. The memory of the days when Paris was in German hands is too recent and bitter. Sooner or later the air will be cleared—by war!

THE COCKPIT OF EUROPE.

Austria is in for troublous times when its aged emperor dies. Nothing is more likely than war with Italy or Germany—perhaps with both. Students of international politics declare that Austria-Hungary will fly into bits when the tight grip of Francis Joseph is relaxed. Twenty millions of its inhabitants are German by blood and speech and sympathy—and Germany naturally turns a greedy eye towards them. The south-west corner is as Italian as Italy itself, and Italy has old scores to pay. Over three millions in the south-east are of Servian blood. It is not at all improbable that within ten years Austria-Hungary, if not dismembered peacefully, will be the cockpit of a big European war.

Sooner or later, too, say most people, war between Great Britain and Germany will come. Germany was a late starter in the race for colonies, and wants a better outlet for her growing population and commerce than the few jungles and barren deserts that are all she possesses abroad. Britain has taken her pick—and Germany considers herself unfairly elbowed out of things.

The friction that led recently to the separation of the hitherto joint kingdoms of

is not dead yet, and might easily end in war, but for two things. They are not strong enough to fight if the Great Powers disapprove of their fighting—and Russia is very close, and very ready for fresh territory.

DAINTY DISHES.

For a Beefsteak Pie.—Remove every particle of fat, as it never bakes well, and makes a pie both greasy and indigestible.

Cateau of Apples.—Boil one pound and a half of loaf-sugar in one pint of water till it becomes syrup, then add two pounds of good apples cored and peeled, add the juice and grated rind of a large lemon, and boil to a soft pulp. Pour into a mould, and when cold turn out and serve with custard.

Stewed Beef with Onions.—Cut one pound of beefsteak into pieces, melt one ounce of dripping in a stewpan which has already been dredged with flour. Turn the meat about till it is browned, but not cooked, and add two sliced onions. Stir all together, and then cover the meat with good gravy. Let simmer very slowly for one hour and a half, then take up the meat, thicken the gravy with half an ounce of dripping rolled in flour, and pour round.

Spanish Tomatoes.—Cut a slice from the stem end, and scoop out the inside of ten large tomatoes. Put the pulp into a basin, add to it two ounces of oiled butter, two tablespoonfuls of lemon-juice, half a pound of chestnuts boiled and grated, and season all with white pepper and salt. This mixture should be of the thickness of cream. Fill the tomatoes with this, spread a little salad mixture over and stand each in a curly lettuce leaf on a dish.

Brown Sugar Cookies.—Cream together two-thirds of a cup of butter and two-thirds of a cup of brown sugar, then add one egg. When well beaten together stir in one cup of rolled oats and two-thirds of a cup of English walnuts chopped fine. Lastly add one cup of flour and one teaspoonful of baking powder. Sift the baking powder with the flour. This recipe will make between twenty-five and thirty. A delightful icing for cakes can be easily made by melting one-fourth of a cake of chocolate in four table spoonfuls of sweet milk. When cool work in one cup of powdered sugar which has been sifted twice. The icing will keep moist.

Meatless Mince-meat.—One peck green tomatoes, chopped fine; drain juice and throw away. Pour on three pints of hot water and cook five minutes. Drain off all juice. Do this three times. Add two and one-half pounds medium brown sugar, two pounds seeded raisins, one-half pound chopped suet, one teacupful of cider vinegar, two level tablespoonfuls of ground cinnamon, one-half teaspoonful each of ground cloves, allspice and nutmeg, one tablespoonful of salt.

Novel Rice Pudding.—Take a quarter of a pound of rice, wash, and boil it in milk, add sugar and salt to taste, and a little spice. When cooked this should be quite

To let vines climb up wooden walls will seriously damage them, as it promotes decay.

A good hair restorer is made of equal parts of oil of rosemary and sweet oil. Apply a very little to the roots of the hair and rub well in.

When boiling a pudding in a cloth, don't forget to put a plate at the bottom of the saucepan, to prevent the bottom sticking to the pan.

Before putting a pair of gloves in your glove box button one glove to the other, and you will never find yourself with a mismatched pair.

In using the rind of a lemon for flavoring, remember that it is only the outer yellow part of the rind that holds the essential oil.

Scratches on polished wood, if not too deep, can be removed by rubbing gently with fine sandpaper, and then with a mixture of olive oil and vinegar.

It is possible to buy remnants of carpets very cheap, and these, cut in to rug lengths and with a fringe added, make excellent and handsome rugs.

To effectually clean a dirty bottle half fill the bottle with black coal, add just enough water to cover and shake vigorously. Then empty out and rinse in several waters.

An authority on the subject says that to remove a scorch from linen cut an onion in half and rub the scorched part with it and then soak it in cold water, when the scorch will soon disappear.

If you wish to draw down the blind, yet have the window open, it is a good plan to have a screw eye in each end of the curtain, which can be fastened to the hooks at each end of the window sill.

Dishes which have become brown from baking may be cleaned by rubbing with a damp cloth dipped in whiting.

For cleaning nickel on ranges, dip a piece of newspaper in clear boiling water and rub the nickel until dry.

When making pastry add the juice of a lemon to the water for mixing. It will make the paste lighter and dispel the flavor of lard.

Brown boots may be blackened by rubbing the blackening well into the shoes with a raw potato and then polishing.

Clear soup should be strained without forcing, through a folded towel, laid on a collander; otherwise particles of egg used in clearing will be forced through and spoil the soup.

Make camphorated oil now and it will be ready for winter. Break up a piece of camphor the size of a walnut, and put it in a bottle with five cents worth of olive oil. Stand in a warm place till dissolved.

This piquant sauce is excellent for flavoring soups and gravies.

He goes to bed at 10 o'clock and rises at 7, but does not sleep soundly.

He is blond, 5 feet 5 inches in height and weighs 154 pounds. His head is unusually large, especially in breadth. His eyes are myopic and unsteady. He stands stooping with his wrinkled forehead upturned.

He speaks somewhat slowly and with a distraught air, as though he were thinking of something else, even though he may be at the time interested and keenly observant. He speaks English and German readily and reads Latin and Italian. He is fond of music, especially Wagner.

Of the absent mindedness that has been characteristic of him from youth, many stories are told, says the Independent. Like most mathematicians he is fond of walking while thinking, his fingers opening and closing in an unconscious gesture. One day on his return from a walk he was surprised to find that he was carrying a wicker cage, new and happily empty. He could not imagine how he had got it, but retracing his steps he found upon the sidewalk the stick of the basket maker whom he had innocently despoiled.

When as an engineering student he made a trip to Austria, his mother was afraid he would drop his portfolio some time without noticing it. So, realizing doubtless that his memory was auditory, she sewed little bells on it.

The plan was successful. His mother found on his return that he had brought back in his valise not only the portfolio but also an Austrian bed sheet neatly folded which, some morning, he had mistaken for his night clothes.

"No. Careless investors."

end in war, but for two things. They are not strong enough to fight if the Great Powers disapprove of their fighting—and Russia is very close, and very ready for fresh territory.

Peru and Chile have reached such a point of prosperity that the ill-will which exists between them is a very serious matter. Their quarrel is about a boundary. It runs vaguely through dense jungles on the slopes of the Andes, jungles unexplored as yet, but certainly of immense value in these rubber-growing days.

Whatever war breaks out in the West of Europe, poor Belgium will certainly be in it. Bigger nations will certainly use her territory as a short cut.

Switzerland is luckier in that way. No thought of possible wars need ever worry Switzerland. She has no sea coast, and so has no navy. Her army she could as easily do without.

CANAL OF STEEL.

In connection with the Nile irrigation system at Wadi Kom-Omba there has been constructed a canal of steel, five thousand two hundred feet in length, whereby water from the service reservoir is distributed to the earth canals. In section this metallic canal is U-shaped, twenty feet broad and twelve feet deep. It is made up of seventeen sections, connected by expansion joints, and the riveted steel plates of which it consists are six millimeters in thickness. During the construction the engineers were troubled among other things by the unequal expansion of the metal. The expansion was greatest on the side where the sun happened to shine full upon the plates and the inequality was often sufficient to displace the end of a section about to be joined as much as four inches to one side or the other.

POINTED PARAGRAPHS.

It's surprising how easy it is to kiss a girl that won't let you.

Some women never get homesick because they are not home long enough.

And many a man treats a stranger better in a barroom than he treats his wife at home.

Once in a great while there is a father who would be glad to have a son follow in his footsteps.

We have often wondered how many wives Solomon had annexed before discovering that there was nothing new under the sun.

"Yes," said the young wife, proudly, "father always gives something expensive when he makes presents."

"So I discovered when he gave you away," rejoined the young husband.

"De man dat talks about hissof an' how honest he is," said Uncle Eben, "allus sounds like he was fannin' kind o' short o' references."

tables spoonful of salt.

Novel Rice Pudding.—Take a quarter of a pound of rice, wash, and boil it in milk, add sugar and salt to taste, and a little spice. When cooked this should be quite stiff. Take half of the rice out of the saucepan and put it in a basin with the remainder, color with a few drops of cochineal. Grease a pudding-basin, put in a layer of rice half an inch deep. Place the mould in cold water, and when the rice is set, add a layer of pink rice and another of white, and so on, till the mould is full, taking care that each layer is set before adding another. Stew a few washed sultans and currants in a little water, sweeten to taste, and pour round the mould.

Mock Angel Food.—Sift four times: One cup sugar, one cup flour, three teaspoons baking powder, pinch of salt. Add to the above mixture one cup of milk heated to boiling point. Beat well, add flavoring then put in whites of three eggs beaten stiff. Fold, but do not stir eggs in. Bake in regular angel food cake tin (kind with hole in center) until it does not adhere to broomstick. Have oven very hot until cake has risen, then cool it by degrees until cake is done. Leave in pan and turn at once upside down to cool.

MAINLY ABOUT A MATTRESS.

A mattress should be turned every day, but unless the turning is done carefully it is liable to work the stuffing out of shape. To prevent this sew handles of ticking or webbing to the sides and you will be able to turn the mattress without straining the ticking.

When one of the rosettes shows signs of coming off, it should be immediately stitched in position, or the stuffing will rapidly work out of place, and the mattress will lose its shape. New rosettes may be made out of old kid gloves and sewn on with fine twine with a long upholstery needle.

By following these hints you will greatly prolong the life of your mattress.

RULES FOR THE KITCHEN.

All busy housewives should know the following golden rules: Hang them in your kitchen; you will find them invaluable.

1. Cleanliness and punctuality are the royal roads to good cooking.
2. Leave nothing dirty; clean and clean as you go.
3. Take care of your pans, and the pots will take care of themselves.
4. Stew boiled is stew spoiled.
5. A good cook wastes nothing.
6. Boil fish quickly; boil meat slowly.
7. Strong fire for roasting; clear fire for boiling.
8. Good cakes are not cooked in poor ovens.
9. Too much seasoning spoils the soup.
10. Spare the currants, and spoil the cake.

HOUSEHOLD HELPS.

When silver is not in constant use a piece of camphor will keep it from tarnishing.

It is wise to break eggs one at a time into a cup and to transfer each one as it is broken. Then, if one proves bad, the whole dish will not be spoiled.

When an oven is too hot the tem-will be ready for winter. Break up a piece of camphor the size of a walnut, and put it in a bottle with five cents worth of olive oil. Stand in a warm place till dissolved.

This piquant sauce is excellent for flavoring soups and gravies. Steep three ounces of salt, two ounces of grated horse-radish, and half an ounce of ginger in three pints of boiling water. Stand for twenty-four hours, then strain and bottle for use.

YOUR POCKET-KNIFE.

You'd hardly credit what a lot of labor has been expended on the pocket-knife you carry. If, for example, it is a three-bladed knife, it may have involved no fewer than one hundred operations, and, as like as not, it has been handled by as many different workmen. Even the blade has to go through six different processes. First it has had to be forged, then laid on the "anvils"—that part which is inserted into the handle, and through which the blade is riveted—next marked or stamped with the name of the manufacturer, afterwards "grinded"—a depression in the neck of the blade between the sharp edge and the heavier part of the "tang" filled in—next tempered, and finally ground. So accurate is the eye of the man who forges the blade into shape, and so exact his hand, that the blade does not deviate a hair's-breadth from the little brass pattern before him, and to which each blade must exactly correspond.

CARE OF FARM IMPLEMENTS.

One of the most serious leaks on the farm is in the poor care taken of farm implements when not in use. As soon as the season is over, binders and other machinery, no longer needed this year, should be carefully cleaned; the grease and dirt should be removed from the bearings, and these should be carefully oiled and all bright parts greased, to prevent rusting. Preparations should be made for replacing any broken or defective parts.

If time does not permit of all this, make a memorandum to be governed by on some stormy day, and then see that everything is put in readiness for the next harvesting or haying season. Get the repairs and place them on the machines at once. Take care of the plow. Get them under cover. Clean and grease the bright parts, so that, when wanted next spring, they will scour and save the time so many farmers lose in putting their implements into working order.

GETS HARDER AND HARDER.

"The average man," says one of the philosophers, "is generally busy making a living."

It is a curious fact that practice never seems to make it any easier.

No doubt there are cheerful givers—but did you ever see one?

Is your husband cross? An irritable, fault-finding disposition is often due to a disordered stomach. A man with good digestion is nearly always good natured. A great many have been permanently cured of stomach trouble by taking Chamberlain's Tablets. For sale by all dealers.

For Mayoralty 1912.

Mr. W. T. Waller will be a candidate for the mayor's chair for 1912. The chief plank in Mr. Waller's platform will be "Boom Napanee in 1912". Napanee needs a good live mayor at this time to take advantage of the opportunities for expansion now offered the town and progressive action is necessary if Napanee is to take advantage of her opportunities, and Mr. Waller should have the opportunity to carry into effect the policy outlined by him. A live progressive council should be elected regardless of politics to loyally support the Mayor in carrying out a policy of "Boom Napanee in 1912."

The Turkey Fair.

Thursday and Friday of last week were the days of the annual turkey fair. Each year sees this fair growing in importance and an ever increasing quantity of poultry purchased. This year there were three buyers in the field, Mr. J. F. Smith, Messrs. Nevin & Son, and Mr. Andrew Kelly. Messrs. Nevin & Son stated that Napanee fair would this year be the largest fair in Ontario as regards the quantity of poultry purchased. The three buyers above mentioned paid out over twenty thousand dollars to the raisers of poultry in this county, a splendid sum, considering the fact that poultry is usually regarded as a side issue on most farms. Turkeys brought a splendid price, as high as 191 cents being paid in some cases for extra choice lots of birds. Fowl and chicken however, formed the bulk of the shipments. Geese and ducks were somewhat scarce, though good prices were offered. The amount of poultry shipped was nearly 85 tons.

Looking for Heirs.

Mr. Chas. N. Page, Des Moines, Iowa, is inquiring for descendants of Thos. Page, formerly of Leominster, Mass., latterly of Upper Canada. Page died about 1830 and proof of time and place of death are wanted.

The Painter and the Cobbler.

The painter Apelles, who flourished in the time of Alexander, was shown a picture by an inferior artist who boasted of having sketched it out in an exceedingly short space of time. "Yes, I can see that very well," said Apelles, "but I am surprised that you did not make several other pictures exactly like this in the same space of time."

We are indebted, according to tradition, to this same Apelles for one of our common phrases. The painter had listened with patience and profit to a cobbler's criticism of the sandals in a picture. But when the cobbler began to enlarge the field of his criticism to other parts of the painting he received this rebuke from Apelles: "Shoemaker, stick to your last."

Mighty Queer.

The negro on occasions displays a fine discrimination in the choice of words, says the National Monthly.

"Who's the best whitewasher in town?" inquired the new resident.

"Ale Hall am a bo'nd a'tist with a whitewash brush, sah," answered the colored patriarch eloquently.

"Well, tell him to come and whitewash my chicken house tomorrow."

Uncle Jacob shook his head dubiously.

"Ah don't believe, sah, Ah'd engage Ale Hall to whitewash a chicken house, sah."

"Why, didn't you say he was a good whitewasher?"

"Yes, sah, a powe'ful good whitewasher, sah, but mighty queer about a chicken house, sah; mighty queer."

Tennyson's Bird Sounds.

Perhaps the best word for the cry of the cricket is that of Tennyson. "Not a cricket chir'd," he writes in "In Memoriam." But Tennyson was always curiously exact in his vocal rendering of the songs of birds. What could be truer to sound than "the moan of doves in immemorial elms?" Then, too, the linnnet, the robin and the thrush "pipe," the woodpecker "laughs" and "mocks," the lark and the plover "whistle," the jay "scritches," the parrot "screams," the peacock "squalis," the blackbird "warbles," while the ocean fowl "shriek" and the eagle "felps."—London Graphic.

Evidently No Friend.

"I thought you were friends."
"Friends! Friends! Why, the man's enmity is so malignant that he gives every book agent and canvasser who comes to his office my address and tells him I'm an easy mark!"—Chicago Post.
